KALEIDOSCOPE

PUBLISHED BY THE JUNIOR CLASS OF MIDDLEBURY COLLEGE MIDDLEBURY, VERMONT
Foreword

The 1933 Kaleidoscope of Middlebury College is published by the class in its junior year, for the dual purpose of recording the events of that period and bringing to general attention the rich historical background of Middlebury. For the central feature of the cover design a likeness of Gamaliel Painter has been chosen, and upon the end sheet linings are representations of Middlebury in 1860—both being symbols of the college's past years. At the same time, the creators of this book stress the present development of Middlebury and the foundations that are being laid for her future progress.

Virgin forest still shaded much of the state when Middlebury College began its existence. The scattered groups of settlers, who fought against the forces of nature for sustenance, had come from the comparatively civilized sections of Massachusetts and Connecticut. Like so many pioneers, they were motivated by two fundamental characteristics, a love of church and a respect for education. They were of the same stock that made and supported Harvard and Yale. It is not surprising then to find that even before 1791 four public academies had been founded in Vermont.

With the dream of a college to complete their educational system, the legislature of the state chartered the University of Vermont in 1791, but no real work was done toward the establishment of a college until much later. Meanwhile the inhabitants of Middlebury had obtained a charter for a grammar school, subscribed four thousand dollars, quadruple the amount called for in the charter, and the Addison County grammar school became a reality in 1797. While building operations were still in progress, Dr. Timothy Dwight of Yale had visited Middlebury and encouraged the idea of founding a college. A combination of fortunate circumstances, coupled with the hope of aid from the sale of state lands, led a group of townspeople to take the necessary steps.

The building erected to house the grammar school was large enough to house the college also. It was a wooden, three-story structure, containing twenty rooms and a chapel. From this small beginning the college has expanded its plant gradually, until today fourteen permanent buildings, in addition to temporary buildings and fraternity houses, are required to fulfill the needs of the students.

The student of the present era has difficulty in visualizing the simplicity of the early days of the college. No laboratories, no carefully catalogued library, no staff of professors and instructors, and no complicated schedules were necessary in the early eighteen hundreds. Instead the founders of Middlebury simply "Procured books, appointed an instructor, and collected a number of students."

All did not go smoothly in the early period of the college’s life. The struggle of Vermont for a position as a sovereign state naturally occupied the minds of the people to a great extent, and the advancement of education was thus hindered. Indeed, when we contemplate the struggles of the settlers for even the necessities of life, the fact that they still had time and energy for the development of cultural institutions is remarkable. It is therefore necessary to wait for two years after their first petition before the group interested in the establishment of a college received a charter from the legislature. On Tuesday, October 28, 1800, the "incorporation was declared expedient by the committee of the whole," and on November 1 the charter was signed by Isaac Techenor, the governor, and Roswell Hopkins, the secretary of state. Among the trustees were Gamaliel Painter, Seth Storrs, Samuel Miller, Daniel Chipman and Darius Mathews, all of whom had been trustees of the Addison County grammar school.

The first meeting of the trustees was held on November 4, 1800. At this meeting Seth Storrs was selected as secretary and Joel Doolittle was chosen as tutor. Dr. Jeremiah Atwater, who was nominal principal of the grammar school, now devoted most of his time to the college—becoming in reality its first president.

The first man to be graduated from Middlebury was Aaron Petty, who received in 1802 the first college degree granted in Vermont. The next year three men received their diplomas, and from that time forth the number of graduates rapidly increased year by year.

When the preparatory school was moved from the original building to a vacated female seminary in 1805, the college might be considered to have acquired its first building, but Painter Hall, which was erected in 1815, is the oldest college building now standing. It had been hoped that the state would furnish aid to the college, but the petition sent in 1810 resulted in words of praise for the efforts of the founders, but no pecuniary aid was forthcoming. The financial situation during these years was precarious, but through the labors of the men who had set their hearts upon the establishment of an institution of higher learning at Middlebury, the college was able to continue its existence.

From the very beginning Middlebury has been strongly influenced by Yale university. A majority of the trustees were Yale men, graduates of that institution formed the greater part of the faculty, and Dr. Dwight, the president of Yale, was one of the most enthusiastic friends of the college. He made three visits to Middlebury and on his return from the third trip praised the college highly, terming the students "... as virtuous a collection of youths as can be found in any seminary in the world."

The story of the first half century of the college is one of financial struggles, for the institution was forced to depend almost entirely upon private gifts. The success of her graduates, however, finally enabled the college to expand. The discussion as to the admission of women began in 1870, but it was not until 1883 that the institution became coeducational. In 1902 the trustees took up the question of the segregation of the two colleges. But it was not until the fall of 1931 that the two colleges actually began separation — the women of the class of 1935 being admitted to what is called the Women's College at Middlebury.
The College

Founded in 1800 by a group of Connecticut men with the ideal of a Yale College in the Green Mountains, Middlebury stands today one of the oldest colleges in the United States. Especially rich in tradition, her gradual growth has reflected the spirit of the founders throughout the years. Painter Hall, erected in 1815, is the oldest college building in Vermont. Here were the original dormitory and administrative facilities, until the structure we now call Old Chapel was built in 1836. The construction of Starr Hall in 1861 completed Old Stone Row. As the campus was improved to keep pace with the development of the college, we find a rapid increase of equipment at the turn of the century. The first quarter of this century saw the addition of eight new buildings, including the library, later enlarged, science buildings, gymnasium, dormitories for men and for women, Mead Memorial Chapel, and the Chateau; all designed and located to give Middlebury a most beautiful campus in New England.

Middlebury College first boasted four complete classes in 1802, when the registration included one senior, three juniors, ten sophomores, and thirteen freshmen. The first graduation exercises were held that year, and it seems unfortunate that the first candidate for a baccalaureate degree was unable to attend his own commencement, due to illness. Throughout the early years of college history, the enrollment mounted steadily, first exceeding an even hundred in 1812 and fluctuating above that mark until a slow decline began from the number of 168 in 1837 to as low as 38 in 1882. A class of six women were the first coeds in 1883, and this seems to have stimulated the enrollment until in 1900 it stood at 123. During the later decades true expansion has begun and at no time since then has there been any serious falling off. While the college grows, a fairly regular proportioning of the classes is in evidence—at present there being 672 undergraduates.

Junior Class History

In this Kaleidoscope with an historical theme, we are looking backward over the college to some extent. But as we look back over the years we are not conscious that so-and-so made a name for himself in the class of 1883, we are only conscious that there was a class of 1883. Perhaps, almost certainly, this will be the condition fifty years from now, and we cannot do anything to change the trend.

History is history and it takes men and actions to make history. The members of the class of 1933, the doings of the class of 1933, will all blend into one another with the passage of time and the result will be a unified remembrance of the class, not of individuals.

While we, the members of the class of 1933, at present think of our class as the best group to ever enter and leave Middlebury, other classes have expressed the same sentiments in the past, others will express them again in the future. It is in the respect of changes in the college curriculum more than anything else that the class of 1933 will be remembered.

With this class was inaugurated the system of comprehensive examinations in the students' major; with this class was first started the plan of a compulsory examination or course in the English Bible; and with this class passed the last semblance of officially permitted hazing. We were the last class to enjoy the privileges of the hat rush, our sole hazing by the sophomores.

So with these changes behind us, all of which have to some extent influenced each one of us, all of which have to some extent influenced the history and tradition of Middlebury College, we look from the past into the future and discover that there is an equal chance for change ahead of us, an equal chance to better our environment and it is with this aim that the class of 1933 draws near the close of its college days,—the aim to improve and be improved as we proceed from college, just as we helped to improve the college and were improved by our stay here.

"And there I was with that gosh darned piccolo."

Working under the handicap of being the younger brother of a famous man, "Dick" came to Middlebury and soon established himself both as a tennis player and as a journalist. Music plays an important part in his life, for he is a member of the band and a frequenter of the third floor front room in Hepburn. One could not ask for a more engaging companion, since Dick combines an appreciation of the humorous with a purposeful seriousness and a strong sense of loyalty, be it either to his friends or to an abstract ideal.

"Sweet music fills the air."

And music does seem to issue from Art at all times and places. Even in local musical comedies the hero, no other than Art, performs with his vocal organs. And what would the glee club do without him? But there is a rumor that his voice is only an exaggerated buzzing, for, you know, he is just another one of these New Jersey mosquitos. But his buzz is harmless, for we find him taking prominent positions in campus affairs, whether it be in the business end of publications, or on dance committees.

Accordingly when we bluff, he explains. We go to movies, he to entertainment courses; when we sit in the shade, he hurdles; and he is bound to succeed because he has painstakingly cultivated the components of success.

He was exposed to the atmosphere of the playhouse in his sophomore year and since that time has gathered a hoard of practical knowledge concerning play production and playwrights. It will be a critical view you will receive, for John has the ability to understand both stage characters and those about him in life. Here we have quite a philosopher. "Joe" is one of those men who understand human nature and can interpret the action of those about him. A great enjoyment for "Joe" seems to be in entering serious discussions and arguments on all phases of life. But his assertions are far from dogmatic, which partially explains why he is one of our most popular members. Joe has an aim in life; the degree of doctor of medicine is his goal, yet he never allows these more serious topics to hamper the enjoyment which it is possible to obtain from Middlebury activities and associations.

Ross lives within himself. Possessed of a strong character, he meets the successes and failures of life without resorting to the weakness of leaning upon others for support. By unequivocal words and actions he shares his enjoyment with his friends, yet never burdens them with any of his problems and hardships. Rather than do this he faces them alone with a stoicism that is the admiration of all. A hard worker, an attractive personality and the ability to be always the gentleman are Cal's most outstanding characteristics. Whether it be at an informal at the gym, in the classroom, or about campus, he is always the same—cheery, friendly, and full of pep. When not studying he is apt to be found shut up in his room, composing long dissertations (the address is somewhere in California).

To change the subject, Cal is inclined toward the more strenuous activities of the athletic field and it is a pleasure to watch him toss the horsehide around.

Another example of the advantages in patronizing local sources is Bill, whom Middlebury attracted from the town itself. Complete as a footballer and track man, he has brought a previous reputation with him to use in the name of the alma mater. That easy way of his helps him along in any group and his is the personality that carries one far after commencement. Not the least of his achievements is the way he responded to the call of new worlds to conquer and saw it "all the way 'round" through a porthole last summer.

We heard Prof start talking some time along in the fall of 1929, and we would tell you when his remarks terminated, except for the fact that that time has not yet come. He is an outstanding authority upon all conceivable subjects, except the Bible, and he can talk at considerable length upon even that. If he chose, he could sell the old ladies' home a Kaleidoscope ad, or pledge a freshman to Phi Beta Kappa without the slightest difficulty, and only space forbids our commenting upon his (?) beautiful derby hat.

A man whose character is something like a prism. On one side we see Leigh, the quiet, confining his remarks to only those things which must be said. Shifting our glance to a second reflecting surface, we again see him, but this time in the role of a student, completing a major in chemistry in his Junior year and working conscientiously at his other courses. Looking in at the third side, we are impressed by his versatility, his work both in the band and on the track being outstanding.

In spite of this boy's worried expression, he is really having a good time in one way or another. His interests are certainly not confined. He collects stamps and tobacco tins with equal interest; does well on the cross country course and is frequently heard in economics discussions. Some day we might find Harry publishing, as a world authority, some book on the why's and wherefore's of the 1931 depression. Who knows what these economists will do. They are always springing surprises on the people at large; why shouldn't Harry do likewise?

It is our understanding that Herb was president of some bachelors' club until recent investigation by the members disclosed that he was not qualified for membership and was consequently ejected, rudely and forcefully. What the circumstances were we do not know, it may be, however, that the others got so sick of hearing about John's duck hunting that they ousted him without ceremony.

Seriously though we cannot imagine Herb being disqualified in any group of fellows, he being too much of an addition for the gathering to lose.

At present Jimmie's highest ambition is to break a fifty on the local course and from all reports his chances seem, well, doubtful. Not only is he bidding fair as an embryo Bobby Jones, but he takes his studies seriously and gives promise of accomplishment along scholastic lines, especially in subjects where creative ability is essential. In addition to these accomplishments Jimmie is a football player and it is said that he wields a mean cue at the local pool rooms where he retires occasionally for recreation.

Even Larry's Ford has not been capable of overcoming that ever-present good nature and if a Ford can't what can?

Underneath it all is a seriousness of attitude which combined with his native ability makes Larry a good man to have on the athletic field or the classroom. While his affability makes friends for him among the students his seriousness appeals to the professors.

Not, you understand, that he is actually small, but the things he does seem out of proportion to his size. Conceded to be the best guard in the state last fall, he is just as much at ease out of uniform, which brings up his latest: anything in the clothing line? See Tot.

Life is just a matter of learning when and where to hold one's peace, and when and where to burst forth in self-expression. Harry evolved that theory last year, as his experience at Middlebury serves to illustrate. Pass him on campus, or, better still, study near him in the library, and he creates the impression of perfect, self-contained quiet, but when the college glee club season matured, Harry poured out his soul in song, with the idea that an even balance between these extremes is ideal. His is the personality that fits in and enlivens any group.

Feeling that "knowledge is power" Pete has put aside the smaller and more insignificant pastimes to indulge to his heart's content gathering that knowledge. To say that he is a "grind," however, is an injustice, for when the opportunity for a swim in the lake presents itself he is the first to take it. Those who have heard him play his violin are always anxious for more and that proves well, for he is not a disciple of the great god Jazz.

Arriving here in his Junior year from Norwich, Ralph has proceeded to make himself at home and has become well known, and liked, even in the short time he has been with us. It is easy to carry on a conversation with a fellow who can talk, and talk intelligently, upon any subject you may choose to bring up, and there is nothing like enthusiasm for creating friendships. These qualities are his and because of them we feel that we have known him for a longer period than we actually have. Also it is a compliment to us when a man leaves a rival college and comes to Midd.

But then Woody does not have to talk—he just does it and when he does anything it usually stays "did." What with his experience in managing—(cross country, managing editor of the Kaleid, sophomore hop committee, etc.)—he ought to be able to succeed when it comes to entering the cold, drear, and still colder world in another year or so. His silent efficiency makes us marvel at this unobtrusive young man from Connecticut. Could it be the fault of his native state?

With some it's the gift o' conversation; with others it's an intriguing turned-up nose; with "Dode" it's just—disposition, that we unanimously acclaim a mark of high favor from the gods. Reminding one of the calmness of a lake in a summer sunset, the eve-ness of the far horizon. Can you imagine, in these days of frantic rush and chase, always sailing through, dignified, unhurried, gracious? "Dode" does. Can you imagine never letting your temper slip, nor revealing those softly padded claws? "Dode" doesn't. She is one of those softly blended portraits—harmoniously quiet and pleasing, set in the frame of modernistic tendencies.

For in Eloise, her naturally jolly temperament and even disposition—that dimple looks like more fun, added gaiety. There lurks there an infectious sense of humor. But who will say Eloise has not her moments of serious thought? These come as often to her as to many and we believe much oftener than to some. As for troubles—it's hard to tell. For Eloise likes to sing, and for this reason she may disguise her blues and paint them red! More power to her, sez we!

Ain't it the truth? But the catch comes when Berry says she must hurry to the studio, or she is on her way to the playhouse, or—most awe-inspiring of all—that she must be at a tea at the Chateau in about ten minutes. Rather preoccupied, but none the less very much alive, Berry tears around campus, trying to perform a half-dozen or more pressing tasks at once—and usually succeeding. The lucky woman makes frequent trips home and comes back to tell us all eagerly about riding horseback all day—awakening in us the green-eyed monster. Then she looks at the work piled up before her and murmurs absent-mindedly, "Ah, qu'est-ce que je dois faire?"

Truer words were never spoken. Seeing the way Rae is driven to playing for the amusement of others, we agree that maybe it isn't such an asset to have piano-ability. Rae is very obliging that way. For her own amusement she quite enjoys spending a daily hour in the chapel, seated at the organ. Just wander in some day and stop, look, and listen; you'll like it—we all do. Then, of course, in her 'spare' time there is always French Lit or some other like diversion to absorb her interest. We wonder, sometimes, if someone very like this Rachael inspired that time-honored ditty—

"Rachael, Rachael, I've been thinking—"
"Oh, Dorothy, where have you been all afternoon?"
And we're willing to bet—well, quite a decent stake—that she has spent the afternoon delving into the never-ending mysteries of the lab. At any rate we come to expect something like that. Some one of these days (possibly due to the strain of this depression or something) Dot may rebel, and waste an hour or so—maybe even go to extremes and waste a whole afternoon. When she does, we'll settle our bills, fold our hands quietly and sink into oblivion. Want to watch it, Dot?

Sheer accident? Well, perhaps, but all the same it's very appropriate. "Brownie" is the only name for her, for brownies have always, from the very beginning of things, had twinkle eyes and smiles which betray scheming. And people always like them—never grow tired of them. Brownies are never known to be cross or malicious. Our Brownie is no exception and in only one way does she differ. This is, that our Brownie is real, just as real as Christmas and summer vacation. She's a complex elf, we find, and has several times the virtues of story-book brownies.

Notice Dot at the Inn or at the Gym—a golden naiad, enjoying the mundane life of mortals, making it a little less drab for us.
True, brother, true! And for what other reason would Ginny have been voted Miss Middlebury College or what have you? Fixing nature and life with an accusing glance we say, "Partiality, I calls it." Ginny works like a Trojan in her courses for a while, then suddenly goes dashing off to the big city for a vacation. Then back to Middlebury, to dig furiously for another month or two. Ginny has made some minor changes this year—mainly in extracurricular activities, and now she may be seen in athletics, and other similar fields.

To most of us Lois seems as ambiguous as this statement. We have seen her guarding the cage closely in hockey—doing it so well that she made All-Midd. But Lois, we know, is not a person with a one-track mind. Lo and behold are always associated in our minds, and it still holds good. For where there is Lo, behold the amusement, the interesting conversation, the interplay of wit—a many-sided prism, with all the facets showing a clear rainbow of colors, the variety of moods and interests which we find to be a part of Lo's make-up.

"Bert" knows a lot of things that the rest of us wouldn't even dare guess at—she's an amazing person that way. "Bert" has an affinity for Warner Science. "Bug" fascinates her, and her favorite hangout is the physiology lab. A glutton for punishment? We sometimes think so. Then when they have parties at the Spanish table or powwows at El Club Espanol, the girl absolutely fazes us! We stand in widespread amazement, then we say, "Ha, ha! wicked queen! We have your number now! Bert, we hate to tell you that you're a dual personality!"

Treasurer, chairman, manager, brisk, businesslike, capable-to-the-finger-tips—Rim! If you want your bills collected, try Rim. If you want to be snug, warm, happy and well fed on a house party, give Rim the job of managing the details. We have confidence, utter and implicit, in this example of infallibility. And hand in hand with this efficiency goes the rarest sense of humor ever. We've all seen that mocking light in her eyes. There's merriment and perhaps a little ironical gleam there. Life amuses Rim, but we feel that she's terribly sympathetic with it just the same.

Mental photography was working one day when Mac came along, and ever since we have carried around in our memories a snapshot of Mac in a big black bear coat. We were favored, however. Do you remember having seen Rim and Mac together? Just ask Mac to sing "Silver Threads Among the Gold"—you’ll be amazed at her dramatic interpretation. And, knowing Rim’s capacity, just imagine an evening in their presence—just one laugh after another. Then, too, of course you know that Mac is living at Homestead. Of course we don’t, but if we were to look for ulterior motives—!

Carol is ambitious—watch out, Carol, so was Caesar. You may have seen some of Carol’s work in the Campus and Saxonian. As if these achievements were not quite sufficient, Carol is always on the lookout for new fields to conquer—and now, this year, she has mastered enough French to eat at the Chateau for weeks without losing an ounce. Living at the Chat, it seems, is nothing more or less than bearding the lion in his own den—one of Carol’s favorite tricks.

Did you ever hear "Zee" recite in a class? If you haven't, grasp a dictionary firmly in your hand, and give your mind a treat—thirty-five-cent words are the lowest price—even in this depression. This erudite maiden has read a library-full of books, has learned the King's English almost in toto, and converses in two or three languages on—pick your own subject.

On the other hand she is a volley-ball, hockey, basketball, and tennis champion. For an ordinary mortal this would be sufficient to hold one's interest, but not for "Zee"—just a few publications, clubs, committees.

One of Ro's tricks is to fool people about herself. It is a big gamble as to whether we will find her as serious as a judge, playing the clown, concentrating—oblivious to the world, or in any one of a dozen other moods. She keeps us guessing—an enigma of small dimensions. One thing we can depend on—she never fails anyone who needs her friendliness. And another thing about Ro, she always wants to share anything she has with others—whether brains, comradeship, or food from home. Ro's repertoire is varied and highly interesting—an asset to any institution, sez we!

"She is pretty to talk with,
And witty to talk with,
And pleasant, too, to think on."
Just about this big—a little half-pint of Mead—and full of pep and enthusiasm. She wields a baseball bat as one of her prehistoric ancestors may have wielded her stone club. Charity begins at home, we are told, but beyond that we cannot vouch for Charity’s whereabouts, her activities, recreation—or any other devices the clever child may know about for killing time, but we never worry about her finding a means. "Where there’s a will there’s a way," and we rest assured that Charity will not lack diversion.

Rose Mary is elusive—if you don’t believe it, just try to get track of her some day—perhaps I should warn you beforehand that she may be immersed in one of her several lab courses, working diligently, testing for an unknown, carving poor unsuspecting wild things, or administering an anaesthetic to the assistant. At the close of a day of such labors Rose Mary emerges from the stone building, still slightly under the influence of chlorine or hydrogen sulphide, and goes to the Studio, where she sings her cares away.

Gladys aspires to dramatic heights—at times almost reaching the melodramatic. The Playhouse is the place where Gladys likes to hang out, and there she coaches the lines and paints scenery in the backfield. (Don’t get hard about it!) Then back to the Chateau, where she eats French, studies Spanish and in spite of it all can still sleep in English. We have not known of her drinking Scotch, but when we do, O Powers That Be, we’ll get our Irish up and make her leave college Russian. This, gentle reader, would surely be her Finnish. If we all had the will power to concentrate our energies on the things in which we are most interested, we might, as “Frannie” does, do a limited number of things well, rather than making a sorry attempt at a larger number of activities. We see “Frannie” walking purposefully around campus, and we think, “There goes a girl with a motive in her madness—a purpose in life.” Frannie always has her mind made up as to what she intends to do, and she sticks to it. We thought that resolutions were made to be broken, but maybe we’re wrong!

Black hair smoothed close behind her ears, eyes that glisten with merriment, and a quick smile which has no favorites. People like Betty are good for us all. Her step is brisk, her thinking clear, her movement vivacious. Red, we judge, is her favorite color. She never seems to be too busy to do something more. In living life to its full, she succeeds remarkably well, and she helps others to do the same thing. Every dormitory should be supplied with at least one person such as Betty, for she fills a very important place in an unobtrusive way.

If you want an example of perpetual motion, we suggest Noddy—never in one place for two consecutive minutes, it seems, and always with something on her mind that she must do. Athletics, dramatics, committees—Noddy is never without some pressing activity. And no wonder, for Noddy accomplishes a great deal, all to the satisfaction of the most critical, and in doing these various things Noddy derives a great deal of enjoyment and fun. 'Tis a merry party that is favored by Noddy's presence, for her gay humor casts a spell and her laughter is contagious.

Most of us spent our first year at Midd just watching and getting the hang of everything, but not so with Mary. She went after things in a big way. Having proven herself in every available sport, she laid aside her "M" sweater long enough to don the more sober executive robes of this, that, and the other thing. There are so many nice things we should like to mention about Mary, but—well—you can see yourself how much room she's left us! So you'll just have to take our word for it, that's all.

We go over to the Chateau to see Janette and Franny and meet Franny going down to the library to study because her roommate can't study when she's in the room. Well, we don't wonder, for either is bad enough alone, and when the two get together their spasms are uncontrollable. Janette cracks a smile, chuckles, giggles, then breaks right down and laughs.

We all have our serious moments—even so with Janette. She puts on her spectacles, registers deep thought and meditation, and studies her French lesson. She ought to be getting quite adept at saying—"Parlay-vo" by this time—three years all spent submerged in the French atmosphere.

Annie goes at things in a grim, determined sort of way, and presto! we find she has challenged courses that are positive ogres and conquered them with her little hatchet. What ho! they are keeping something from us! Annie's modesty is such that she might not want to confess that she has conquered such worlds—but someone might have told us.

Annie appears—tall and very slender, at ease, and never in too much of a hurry to want to talk or dance. We sometimes wonder what goes on behind that impenetrable expression—but mind readers are rather scarce, and that would be our only means of probing Annie's real thoughts.
When Joan came to college she was considered "the child wonder"—merely because of chronological age, and certainly due to no conduct of hers!

Joan harks back to that saint, Joan of Arc, and with sweet resignation allows her elders to unload all their dirty work onto her shoulders—surely self-sacrificing, saintlike service! She has the sweet disposition that goes with a saint, too. She always seems to be quiet but watchful, appreciative and sincere; and in her eyes lurks the most scintillating spark of humor imaginable. Did I say, too, that Joan is a fine athlete? She not only has excellent form, but she always feels the spirit of the game.

Peg had been hiding her light under a bushel, spending all these years at the Chateau. Of course, nothing against the Chateau is meant by this statement, but we feel a reluctance to plunge into the foreign atmosphere and we find it very difficult at times to become acquainted in the continental manner, with the impediment of speech!

Since Peg came to college she has acquired a flivver and thereby hangs more than one tale. Peg converted the shining twentieth century steed to a beast of burden, and it is never seen with less than half a dozen on board.

We got past the Halfway House to Mood Indigo one day, and were about to sink mentally to the sixth basement, when Scotty came in. "Boo! you pretty creature!" said she. Then she piled up a stack of pillows into which we sank gratefully, got out a book of poetry and read to us. Scotty is the panacea for everything. When we feel lively, we still can't keep up with her; when we feel a bit low, Scotty is right there, offering her shoulder for us to weep on; and when there is anything really difficult to be done, we depend on Scotty's resourcefulness.

Helen lives up to this in every way and seems to be headed straight for some rich reward. She always has her lessons done two or three days ahead, and yet she goes in for athletics quite intensely. Whatever Helen may be interested in, she performs to the full extent of her ability. We have noticed in the dining-room at Bat Cot how efficiently Helen manages affairs. She rests her business and like her mind frequently takes a vacation while she goes music-wise and dons the cap and gown of the choir or goes to the studio to lift her voice in jubilant song.

You know this tiny red-head who darts around campus like the flame of a blow-torch? She and Elly are almost inseparable companions and are always to be seen laughing and talking together. We saw some snapshots of Ruth her freshman year, when the big brutes with whom she lived at Wilcox balanced her on the top of a post and entered her in a pole-sitting contest.

Did you ever see Red doing an interpretative dance? She used to wear a Nile green "flit" costume and, you may believe us, she closely resembled a dryad just stepping out of her own particular tree-trunk!

Sitty is a precocious child. She goes in for all the "advanced" courses. To compose an intricate piece of music is just another assignment to her, and she revels in composing poetry or short stories. She herself is always composed, and that makes the story complete!

Sitty sits down at the piano and her long musician's fingers go racing over the keys in the rendition of anything from "Nola" to Beethoven's "Sonata," done with all the fine interpretation and technical skill we could ask for. Eventually, we suppose, Sitty will combine the poetry and music to make serenades and songs. Waiting!

Someone usually gets the brilliant idea of playing bridge and having something to do. That is the cue to go to "Spenny's" room. You won't be the first to have that idea, for there is always a crowd in the room playing the newest records, and taking the goods the gods provide. Spenny is the world's best hostess, by repute, and deals hospitality with a lavish hand.

Spenny is avowedly athletically inclined. She plays tennis well—(ask one of her opponents!) and has formed the very creditable habit of making the All-Midd hockey team.

Don't ever argue anything out with Janet unless you've no strenuous objections to being converted. Janet simply has a knack of proving she's right. If you're not instantly convinced, woe betide you—for Janet has that certain tenacity of purpose when she starts convincing, and there's no let-up until she's completely satisfied. Now take debating for example. When Janet joined the debaters, the team's stock went up some incredible number of points. Janet doesn't confine her talent to debating though, for we have seen her do some clever interpretations of characters at the Playhouse.

Some impractical person once declared that we needed another dormitory on our side of the hill. Bobbie took exception to this to show us that if we only had the necessary insight into the situation we would understand that it is not imperative since we can take advantage of all the extra room at Porter Memorial Hospital. We doubted even after her first visit to do research work; so Bobbie went back to get more data to uphold her argument and, after all, she’s probably right! She found that the main drawbacks were: (1) the interminable distance between the Hospital and her pet course at the Chateau; and (2) people living there were furnished with no equipment for swimming. Maybe she’ll stay with us for a while now!

Elaine seems so carefree when we meet her on campus. Exercise is essential to her existence. Have you noticed that she is invariably in training? Whatever the sport is at the time, Elaine is right there to aid in putting over a successful season, be it hockey, volleyball, baseball, tennis or archery. No branch of endeavor seems to be too much of a tax on her time or energy; even lab experiments and math problems are never intricate to her clear-thinking mind. There Elaine balances her intellectual pursuits with her position on the business staff of the Kaleidoscope.

It's hard to tell—it's hard to tell! She may be doing almost anything—but she won't be wasting time, we can depend on that. Her first two years Alice decided to learn something of Ancient Greece—and she studied diligently the books that were Greek to us. Maybe she was deeply interested—at any rate she gave that impression. We find this to be true of everything Alice undertakes—she always does the necessary work and cultivates a certain amount of enthusiasm. And as for sports—there's no necessity there for manufacturing synthetic eagerness.

Dot comes blowing in from hockey or some other strenuous form of exercise, with her hair a mop of tangled curls, and flops down on the bed, uttering in a heartfelt manner the above words. But she thinks of something funny (or maybe Mac starts it!) and her rest is thereafter intermittently shattered by wild whoops of laughter. Last year Dot figured prominently in the Mountain Club trips, and her beaming countenance appears in the college movies—it's a good ad for the Club, we'll admit.

Milton must have had someone like "Ginnie" on his mind when he invoked the goddess of mirth. Certainly, "those quips and cranks and wanton wiles, nods and becks and wreathed smiles" describe Ginnie perfectly. We might, however, take exception to the word "goddess," which implies to our untutored minds some being supernatural. Ginnie is quite human, we can assure you—only her sense of humor could be termed abnormal and her good nature considerably above the average. Ginnie dotes on bacteria and professes to be an agnostic. Skepticism tempered with humor is a combination that should certainly help Ginnie over the bumps.

Grace has been repeatedly on the Dean's List, and already has staked claims on a Phi Beta Kappa key, it is mere play for her. How enviable is her natural magnetic power for the first two letters of the alphabet! They appear automatically as though governed by Grace's hypnotic power. Soon Grace shuts her books, dons her gym clothes and spends a few hours of work in the gym in contrast to the other hours of her day. And here, too, she has an irresistible attraction for the first teams. Look at her collection of numerals and letters some day—she's saving them to make a quilt.

Fraternity life at Middlebury was an early feature of the college. Chi Psi installed a chapter here in 1843, followed in 1854 by Delta Kappa Epsilon, and Delta Upsilon two years later. For fifty years these fraternities held sway until the Alpha chapter of Kappa Delta Rho was founded in 1905. Three local houses became units of national fraternities in 1925, adding Alpha Sigma Phi, Beta Kappa, and Sigma Phi Epsilon to the list. Beta Psi was then installed in 1927. Six national sororities maintain Middlebury chapters. The first to be installed was Pi Beta Phi in 1893. Sigma Kappa arrived in 1911, followed by Delta Delta Delta in 1917. In 1923 Chi Omega became Kappa Kappa Gamma, while Alpha Xi Delta and Phi Mu were first represented in 1925. Four leading honorary societies are present at Middlebury, including scholastic Phi Beta Kappa, forensic Tau Kappa Alpha, journalistic Pi Delta Epsilon, and educational Kappa Phi Kappa.
The Interfraternity Council governs the making and enforcement of all rules in matters pertaining to the fraternities. Each group is represented by two of its members, one senior and one junior.

Last Fall rushing began on the fourth Monday of the college year. This system formerly called for intensive rushing beginning with the first Monday of college classes, but due to a general feeling of dissatisfaction a postponement was effected.

Chi Psi is one of the oldest of the Greek Letter fraternities, having been founded in 1841. Like several others of the older fraternities, it had its origin at Union College. While Chi Psi has only twenty-five active chapters, these chapters are distributed widely throughout the country and rank among the highest.

Alpha Mu of Chi Psi, the first secret fraternity at Middlebury, was founded November 16, 1843, and is the third chapter of Chi Psi to be established. Beginning its career in one room, Chi Psi at Middlebury has expanded until now, after having moved several times, it occupies the newest house on the hill, completed in the spring of 1929.

Delta Kappa Epsilon

FOUNDED 1844

Delta Kappa Epsilon was organized June 22, 1844, at Yale College, by fifteen members of the class of '46 who had agreed to go fraternity together, but could not decide between two junior societies. As a solution, they conceived the idea of a new fraternity, and Delta Kappa Epsilon was established, later to be Phi chapter of the national. Expansion has been rapid, and at present there are 47 active chapters, all owning houses but two. A clubhouse and general offices are located in New York City.

On September 19, 1854, Delta Kappa Epsilon established Alpha Alpha at Middlebury. Originally chartered as Alpha, the chapter stands nineteenth in the order of inception, and was changed to Alpha Alpha when the Alpha chapter at Harvard was revived in 1887. Located first in a suite of rooms downtown, the home of the chapter has changed several times, until in 1905 a house was selected on the corner of the campus. This was rebuilt and completed in 1927.

Delta Upsilon had its beginning in 1834 at Williams, where a small group of students, who were opposed to the secret fraternities, founded the Social Fraternity. Similar organizations were formed at Union, Amherst, and Hamilton colleges. In 1847 the four chapters met at Troy, and banded themselves together into the Anti-Secret Confederation. Delta Upsilon has grown since that time, and now has chapters in fifty-five colleges.

The early history of the Middlebury chapter is not known exactly. In 1856 the local fraternity joined the Anti-Secret Confederation, but there may have been a chapter here before that. Originally, the fraternity was a literary society, holding meetings weekly in downtown rooms.

The Kappa Delta Rho fraternity was founded at Middlebury College in the spring of 1905, being an outgrowth of the so-called Commons Club. The organization existed as a local fraternity until 1913 when one of its members, transferring to Cornell University, founded the Beta chapter there. Since then there has been a steady expansion, the Tau chapter, founded at Carnegie Tech in 1930, making a total of nineteen active chapters.

For the first few years the Alpha chapter occupied rooms in one of the downtown buildings, but in 1917 it purchased the house on South Street which it now occupies.

K. D. R. alumni associations are located in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Indianapolis and Los Angeles.

Beta Kappa
FOUNDED 1901

Beta Kappa fraternity has just passed its thirtieth birthday. Founded at Hamline University in 1901 as a purely local fraternity, it was incorporated in the spring of 1912, and nine years later, in 1921, plans for nationalization were started. During the years 1921 to 1924 three chapters were established in the west, and following this orientation period, expansion has been rapid, so that now the fraternity has an active membership in many of the larger institutions in all sections of the country.

Epsilon chapter was established at Middlebury in February of 1925 at the petition of Chi Kappa Mu, a local group, organized in 1921.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON was founded at the University of Richmond, then Richmond College, November, 1901. The basis of the organization was a society called the Saturday Night Club with a membership of a half-dozen men. The fact that the badge was heart-shaped caused the fraternity at first to be called the "Sacred Hearts."

The Vermont Beta Chapter was established in 1925, the basis being the local Sigma Phi Iota fraternity. Membership in the Middlebury chapter now includes a hundred men. Sigma Phi Epsilon is one of the largest and strongest national fraternities, although it has been in existence but thirty years; yet it is seventh in number of chapters among the national fraternities.

The Alpha Chapter of Alpha Sigma Phi was founded at Yale University in 1845 as a junior society. A few years later the fraternity became national with the installation of a chapter at Harvard. After 1875 a gradual expansion took place pushing westward through the larger colleges and universities until, at the present time, there are thirty-three active chapters in all corners of the nation.

The Middlebury chapter had its origin in the Commons Club which was founded in 1906, and which became the local fraternity Alpha Sigma Phi in 1911. For fourteen years the society remained purely local, but in 1925 it became the Alpha Delta Chapter of the national fraternity, Alpha Sigma Phi.

Beta Psi, as a national fraternity, was originally conceived by a group of students attending Crane Junior College in Chicago. They decided to band themselves together after graduation from Crane and form a fraternity. Part of the group entered the University of Illinois and there founded the Alpha Chapter of Beta Psi in 1920, while the rest founded the Beta Chapter at Armour Tech in that same year.

The Middlebury Chapter was originally a local fraternity founded by a group of Middle Painterites in 1926 and known as Delta Sigma. This group became affiliated with national Beta Psi in 1928. In January, 1929, the fraternity rooms were destroyed by fire and later that same year the present house was acquired.

Pi Beta Phi was founded at Monmouth College, April 28, 1867. This organization of 12 charter members was originally known as I. C. Sorosis, and not until 1889 did it adopt the Greek letter name. Pi Beta Phi has the distinction of being the oldest national women's fraternity. The organization was also represented at the first Pan-Hellenic conference and was first to be admitted to the Association drawn up at this time.

No local sorority preceded Pi Phi at Middlebury, but Vermont Alpha was established here in 1893, as the first national women's fraternity on the campus. This group is one of 78 chapters now on the membership enrollment.

Sigma Kappa stands among the pioneer Greek letter organizations for women. The sorority was founded in November, 1874, at Colby College, Waterville, Maine, by the first five co-eds to enter that College. Since then the organization has grown very steadily, until, at the present time, there are forty-two active chapters. In 1904, Sigma Kappa became a member of the National Pan-Hellenic Congress.

Nu chapter of Sigma Kappa was established on Middlebury campus, October 6, 1911, when a local sorority, Pi Mu Epsilon, founded in 1909, was granted a charter in Sigma Kappa. This organization holds the position of being the second oldest national sorority at Middlebury.

Delta Delta Delta was founded at Boston University on Thanksgiving Eve, 1888, by four members of the class of 1889, whose purpose was to provide a better social atmosphere for the college. Growth has been so constant that Tri-Delt, with a present enrollment of 81 chapters, is now one of the largest Greek letter organizations for women. The sorority was one of seven to participate in the first Pan-Hellenic conference.

Alpha Iota was established at Middlebury in 1917, with the local sorority, Phi Mu Gamma, as a nucleus. Each founder’s day is celebrated in conjunction with Eta Chapter at the University of Vermont.

Kappa Kappa Gamma was founded at Monmouth College, Monmouth, Illinois, October 13, 1870. Since then the fraternity has grown rapidly and now has an enrollment of 67 chapters in the United States and Canada. Nearly all of the fraternities were founded as literary societies; but have grown more and more into social groups. This is true of Kappa although she still maintains the literary aspect.

Alpha Chi at Middlebury became Gamma Lambda Chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma in 1923 as a result of their sturdiness, loyalty and perseverance. Gamma Lambda, mingling the ideals of Alpha Chi with the newer ones of Kappa, has won for herself a place worthy of recognition on the Middlebury campus.

Alpha Xi Delta was founded at Lombard College, Galesburg, Illinois, in 1893, as an organization for the betterment of the college and student body. It was never intended that it should remain a local group, and on April 17, 1902, definite plans were made for nationalization and a constitution was adopted. Since then fifty chapters have joined, among which is the Alpha Pi Chapter at Middlebury.

The Middlebury chapter of Alpha Xi Delta, founded June 13, 1925, was formerly a local organization, known as Theta Chi Epsilon, and had thirty-four charter members. The membership total has been limited each year that the principles of Alpha Xi Delta may be carried on more successfully.

Phi Mu, the second oldest secret organization for women, was founded January 4, 1852, by three students in Wesleyan College at Macon, Georgia. The three founders of the Philomathean Society, as Phi Mu was then called, did not announce it publicly until March 4, 1852. Later, in 1904, fifty-five members petitioned the Superior Court of Bibb County, Georgia, for a charter, thus establishing the foundation for a national organization. Phi Mu was admitted to National Pan-Hellenic Congress, December 23, 1911.

Beta Lambda Chapter of Phi Mu was originally Delta Omega Delta, a local sorority founded in 1921. In 1926 this organization petitioned Phi Mu for a charter and on September 16 was duly installed.

Pan-Hellenic Association

The Pan-Hellenic Association is an organization whose purpose is to promote friendly relations between sororities, to maintain high social and scholastic standards, and to cooperate with the college's ideals for student life.

The Council consists of twelve members, one Senior and Junior being delegates from each chapter. Offices are held in rotation.

The Council determines rushing rules and regulates all other matters of Pan-Hellenic interest for the mutual benefit of all sororities.

Phi Beta Kappa

Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholastic fraternity, was founded at the College of William and Mary in 1776. The Middlebury chapter, Beta of Vermont, was established in 1869. Membership is limited to those who have attained an average of 89 per cent for six semesters, or 87½ per cent for eight semesters, up to one-fifth of the senior class, men and women being considered separately.

Pi Delta Epsilon

The local chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalistic fraternity, was established at Middlebury in 1930. This group satisfies the urgent need of an organized body for discussing journalistic problems and encouraging improvements in campus publications. The fraternity is self-perpetuating, and only students in the men’s college who have been editor or business manager of a major publication are eligible for election.

Besides the indirect function of providing recognition for outstanding journalists, the board has several definite activities: in conjunction with the Blue Key, programs for at-home football games are printed, and distributed at a minimum price; for the last two years high school contests, to choose the best secondary school paper, have been conducted throughout the state; the Freshman Handbook is published under direct supervision of the board; and the annual Literati Ball is sponsored and conducted under its auspices.

Tau Kappa Alpha

TAU KAPPA ALPHA, national honorary debating fraternity, was founded at Annapolis in 1908 for the purpose of promoting interest in debates and to recognize excellence in public speaking. The Middlebury chapter was established as a coeducational group in 1921.

Eligibility for membership is determined by participation in two or more inter-collegiate debates or oratorical contests.

The organization provides for the entertainment of visiting teams, and manages the annual debate between the men's and women's colleges. The policy of the fraternity to furnish judges for secondary school debates has been carried out here, and members of the local chapter have served in this capacity. This arrangement has proved advantageous not only to the college students but also to the high school authorities. Exhibition contests before community groups throughout the state are also important in the work of the fraternity.

Mu chapter of Kappa Phi Kappa, national education fraternity, was installed at Middlebury in 1925, proposing to stimulate the interest of those planning to enter educational fields. Membership is limited to undergraduate men who have had at least two courses in education and who are preparing to follow some branch of this work after graduation.

Bi-weekly meetings of a social and instructive nature, which are usually held at the home of a professor, give the student opportunity to discuss problems with others of the same interests.

Middlebury is fast gaining a name as a college for teachers, and she has reason to feel proud of her success, for while not concentrating her efforts in this field, she is recognized as the equal of schools whose main end is to fit students for the teaching profession.

Kappa Phi Kappa realizes its responsibility as a representative of this movement and has determined that to the best of its ability the high standard of quality shall be maintained.

When Middlebury College first entered the field of intercollegiate athletics, the sport was baseball and the year was 1891. Football was begun in 1893 with two games with Norwich University. Not until 1910 was track adopted at Middlebury, and the initial schedule of basketball was played in 1918. The minor group of sports came into being largely during the last decade, and hockey, started under student supervision in 1922, has brought seven consecutive state championships to the college and now attains the rank of major sports here. With the athletic program arranged at present, Middlebury is represented regularly against Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Princeton, Brown, and several other smaller New England colleges. The high point of any schedule, however, is the state series, when the old rivals, University of Vermont and Norwich, are contested. Middlebury College has always recognized the advantages of intramural competition by a large percentage of the student body, and the old annuals show a wide range of these games.
The Athletic Council

The Athletic Council has absolute control over all activities of the men's college in the field of sport. Contests, both intramural and intercollege, must meet with the approval of this board and it must be consulted before any athletic program can be considered official. All appointments, such as captaincies or managerships, must be recognized by this group, and no insignia may be awarded without its knowledge and consent. It is also responsible for the receipt and expenditure of funds for athletic purposes.

The board is composed of the director of athletics, four faculty members, and six undergraduates, comprising the captains of the five major sports and the captains of minor sports in season. Varsity managers are members ex-officio.

Meetings do not follow a fixed schedule, but are called at the discretion of the officers.

The Coaches

ARTHUR M. BROWN
Graduating from Williams in 1907, he spent three years coaching at DePauw University, which resulted in one baseball and two football championships. After three years coaching at Grinnell, he became Supervisor of Physical Education of the Trenton, N. J., schools. Since coming to Middlebury in 1919 he has produced eight state championship teams in track, as well as winning in 1920 a state title in football. For the past eight years he has been Director of Athletics and Physical Education, confining his coaching to track and cross country.

BEN H. BECK
After graduating from Nebraska University in 1916, he coached the Lincoln (Neb.) High School football team to a championship two years later. Five years of coaching at Hamlin University brought forth one Minnesota state championship team. In 1927 he became coach of football and basketball at Middlebury.

RICHARD J. PHelan
Graduated from Holy Cross in 1929 and came to Middlebury as coach of hockey as well as line coach of varsity football. Since his appointment as hockey coach he has produced three championship teams—extending the number of consecutive state titles to nine. In summer he is engaged in professional baseball.

HARVEY W. HESSLER
Came to Middlebury in the capacity of freshman football coach after graduating from the University of Cincinnati in 1927. At a later date he became coach of baseball. During his time here, he has coached one championship team and tied for two others in the state freshman football contests.

Hoyle Scores in Win Over Norwich

Victories over the University of Vermont and Norwich University, which gave Middlebury her third straight Green Mountain conference championship, made the Panthers' 1931 football season a success. The Blue and White gridsters also defeated the Coast Guard Academy, but lost the other five games on their schedule.

During the past season, the Panthers scored 68 points to their opponents' 212, and were dipped in the whitewash three times, while scoring one shutout victory themselves. A veteran backfield gave the 1931 machine more offensive power, but the line was not so strong as it had been the year previous. Under the guidance of Coaches Beck and Phelan, however, the team gradually came into shape, and at the close of the season was a real state championship team.

Although many lettermen of this season's team have played their last game for Middlebury, the return of such men as Captain-elect MacLean, Corliss, Brown, Wright, Jocelyn, Lovell and Reid in the line, and Hartrey, Hoyle, Yeomans and Collins in the backfield should enable Coach Beck to turn out another outfit which will make a strong bid for the Vermont title. Good reserves from this year's squad and members of the 1935 frosh club are available for filling the gaps left by graduation, the largest of which is the loss of Captain Charlie Thrasher, all-state wingman for the past three years.

Columbia

Meeting the most powerful eleven that Columbia has had in recent years, the Panthers were swamped by a 61—0 score. Although the Blue gridsters were unable to stop the fast and shifty Columbia backs, Thrasher's men did manage to make six first downs against their heavier opponents. Markowski's punting and Thrasher's all-around play were the features of the game from the Middlebury viewpoint.
Lowell Textile

In their first home game of the season, the Blue and White grid team bowed to a strong team from the Lowell Textile Institute, but not until they had scored two touchdowns to their opponents' three to make the final count 21—13. The Middlebury offense was of a sensational nature, for their first touchdown came on a pass from Yeomans to Thrasher, who eluded three Lowell men in his twenty-five yard run for a tally. Hoyle intercepted one of the visitors' passes on his own three yard line and carried the ball the length of the field for a touchdown. The Panthers were unable to stop Savard, whose slashing runs were the backbone of the Lowell offense.

Massachusetts State

Led by Louis Bush, the Massachusetts state college gridsters defeated the Blue warriors 32—6 at Amherst. The fact that Middlebury made twelve first downs to their opponents' five, and the manner in which the Panther line outplayed their rivals were the bright spots in the contest. The injury jinx struck its first hard blow of the season at the Panthers in this contest, for Markowski, regular quarterback, was lost to the team for the remainder of the schedule.

A drive in the last quarter, with Hoyle carrying the oval across from the five yard marker, resulted in the only touchdown made by Thrasher's men. Bush was the big gun for the home team, scoring four of the five touchdowns made by the Amherst boys.

Coast Guard Academy

Returning to Porter Field for their fourth contest, Middlebury handed the Coast Guard Academy a 15—0 setback. The Blue line came into its own in this game, with MacLean, Thrasher and Wright in the leading rôles.

During the first half, Thrasher's men were unable to convert their slight edge into a score. In the third quarter, the Blue warriors drove the Tars back into the proverbial "shadow of the goalposts," and then blocked a punt which was recovered in the end zone for a safety, Middlebury's first two points of the game. A little later in the same period, Steve Hoyle broke loose in midfield and crossed his opponents' double line for a touchdown. Hartrey's line buck from the one yard stripe accounted for the second Panther tally.

Springfield

It was an injury hampered team which Middlebury sent against the veteran eleven from Springfield College, and the final score of 54—0 was about all that could be expected. Outweighed fifteen pounds to the man in the line, and opposed by experienced backs such as Owl, White and Knowlton, the Panthers were completely outclassed. Many of the regulars did not see service, due to injuries, while Collins, fullback and Rosbrook, tackle, both received serious injuries in this contest.

Clarkson Tech

The Middlebury gridsters finally succeeded in smothering a fast back, when they held Hutterman, quarterback for Clarkson Tech, to a single touchdown, which was the only score made by his team in the Panthers' sixth game of the season. Thrasher's men were unable to score themselves, however, so that the Engineers managed to eke out a 6—0 win.

The only real scoring opportunity which the Blue and White had came in the second quarter, when the Green and Gold forward wall checked the Panthers on the Clarkson one yard line. In the second half, both teams fought on even terms, and both resorted to the aerial attack toward the close of the game. Yeomans' punting and Hartrey's ball toting were the features of the Middlebury offensive play.

Norwich

As usual, the Blue and White played their best football in the state series battles. Against Norwich, the Panthers reached top form, and flashed a smoothly coordinated attack and a scrappy defense to win 31—6.

During the first half the predictions of a close contest seemed to be verified. The Panthers managed to draw first blood, when, with the ball on the Maroon thirty-seven yard line, a perfectly executed play, a forward from Hartrey to Reid, who then tossed a lateral to Hoyle, enabled the latter to cross the Cadet goal line with little difficulty.

After a Middlebury fumble in the end zone had given the Horsemen the pigskin on their own twenty-yard stripe, the Cadets started an uninterrupted march down the field for a touchdown, but failed in their try for an extra point. The Maroon gridders then started their overhead attack, and for a time things looked bad for Thrasher's men.

When the teams returned to the field for the second half it was a different story. Soon after play resumed, Hoyle sprinted fifty-five yards for his team's second tally. This was the beginning of the end, for although the Panthers did not score again in the third quarter they carried the oval to the Cadets' nine-yard line. In the last period the visitors were completely outclassed. Two successive drives gave Anderson the opportunity to carry the ball over the last stripe on line plunges, and Andy came through on both occasions. The final touchdown was made by Yeomans, who received a pass from Hartrey and tore twenty-five yards through the Norwich secondary.
Vermont

Since the Horsemen had defeated Vermont 26—7, comparative scores would make Middlebury about seven touchdowns better than the Green and Gold, but the dope bucket received its usual upset, for when the Panthers invaded Burlington, they met a scrappy team which provided the most exciting contest of the season before going down to a 13—12 defeat.

Throughout the first period an exchange of punts and fumbles by both teams kept the ball around mid-field. The Panthers’ drive in the second quarter placed the oval on their opponents’ thirty-five yard line. Yeomans then dropped back and tossed a pass to Thrasher, who made a beautiful catch and crossed the Catamount’s goal line for a touchdown. Corliss’ successful place kick gave the Blue the extra point which proved to be the margin of victory.

The Green and Gold gridders came right back, however, and before the half had ended a forward from Bedell to Saba resulted in a touchdown, but the Catamount quarter-back failed to add the extra point.

In the third period, the spectators had their full quota of thrills. After his team had recovered a Middlebury fumble deep in the Panthers’ territory, Winant broke through left tackle and scored the second Vermont tally, but again Saba’s place-kick missed the cross-bar in his try for point after touchdown.

Yeomans ran back the kick-off nineteen yards to start the Panthers on a drive which carried the ball over the Catamount goal line in thirteen plays. Two lateral passes, accounting for a total gain of thirty yards, were the most sensational plays in the advance, but Hartrey’s off-tackle smashes were the real backbone of the Blue attack. Hoyle finally carried the ball over from the one-yard line, but Corliss’ place kick hit the goal post and bounced the wrong way.

The third period fireworks were not over, however, for Vermont drove down to the Middlebury ten-yard stripe. Here Saba tried to kick a field goal, but his kick missed by inches, and the Panthers still held their slender lead.

Neither team was able to gain very much ground in the last period, and a punting duel resulted. The spectators were given a much needed rest from the strain of the third period plays. When the final whistle blew, Middlebury was still in the lead by a single point, thus making them football champions of the Vermont colleges for 1931.
The Season

Encountering strong opponents throughout the entire season, the Middlebury freshman football team was able to win only one game, scoring a 14—7 victory over the Norwich Plebes. A scoreless tie with St. Michael’s junior varsity, and losses to Clark school, the Clarkson Tech yearlings, and the Vermont freshmen completed the schedule. The defeat at the hands of the Vermont freshmen deprived the Blue frosh of their chance for the state title.

The team which represented Middlebury during the season was well-balanced but light. At the beginning of the season, Coach Hessler found that he had an oversupply of backs, but that he needed ends. As a result Bakey was converted into a wingman, and Boehm played the other end in the first game, Hiller later taking his place. With the help of Perry, captain of the 1930 varsity, and Nelson, all-state center, a fairly strong line was whipped into shape.

In the first game of the season, the Panther cubs suffered a 24—0 setback at the hands of the invading Clarkson Tech frosh. The running attack of the visitors, polished by previous contests, was too much for the Blue yearlings. Broadbent, Sidelecki, and Percy led the Engineers’ attack, which carried the ball over the goal line in the first, third and last quarters. In the last period, the Hesslerites resorted to the overhead game.
Several nice gains resulted, and together with the excellent punting ability displayed by Allan, were the bright spots in Middlebury's half of the game.

After a two-week lay-off, Middlebury journeyed to Northfield, where they scored their only victory of the season, trouncing the Plebes 14—7. Although outweighed in the line, the Blue frosh outclassed their rivals by a bigger margin than the score would indicate, for they kept the ball in the Horsemen's territory until the last quarter.

A punting duel occupied much of the first quarter, although Abbott, Allan and Boehm carried the ball to the one-foot mark just before the whistle blew. Abbott carried it over the last stripe on the first play in the second quarter, and a pass from Allan to Bakey added the extra point. The Panther cubs made their second touchdown on a lateral pass from Allan to Boehm. Allan drop-kicked the point after touchdown. The Cadets scored their only points in the last quarter, when they drove down the field on straight football.

The passing attack of the Clark School gridsters was too much for the Middlebury team, in their next game, at Hanover, and the home team emerged with a 36—12 victory to their credit. In scoring their two touchdowns, the Panther cubs utilized the overhead game. In the second quarter, forwards from Nash to Allan helped to place the ball in Clark School's territory, and a pass from Nash to Zawistoski resulted in the first Blue tally. A lateral from Abbott to Nash, after a last quarter march had carried the ball to the five-yard line, enabled Middlebury to score again.

One of the strongest freshmen teams to represent Vermont in recent years invaded Porter field and defeated the Middlebury yearlings, 20—0. The Kittens had things all their own way in the first half, but the story was a little different in the second, for the Middlebury team not only held their opponents scoreless but threatened the Vermont goal line, only to lose the ball on an intercepted pass.

In their last game the Panther freshmen travelled to Winooski, where they played a scoreless tie with the St. Michael's junior varsity. Fumbles and penalties were frequent, and with the exception of a forty-yard pass from Allan to Bakey, the game was rather listless.

The Season

Under the leadership of Captain Ashdown, the Blue and White basketball team turned what threatened to be a very unsuccessful season into one that in reality was quite the opposite. With a schedule of twelve games to be played, the Middlebury quintet dropped the first six to their opponents, among these six being two of the state series games. Of the remaining half dozen the Blue team lost but one and that with only a two basket margin. The last four games on the schedule were with state opponents and Middlebury triumphed in all of them, tying Norwich for the Green Mountain conference title by so doing.

Dartmouth

The first game of the season was played at Dartmouth on December 12, with the powerful Green team coming out on the long end of a 41-19 score. Chalmers was high scorer for Middlebury, tallying eight points, while Sweet was right behind... him with seven. Ashdown and Corliss accounted for the other four points of the game. Being the first game of the season for the Blue and White, their attack was not as polished as it might have been, while the strong Dartmouth five played smoothly in its third encounter.

Williams

The second game, and also defeat, of the season was played at Williams, where Captain Ashdown and his men lost by a 26-42 score. In this game it was Chalmers and MacKenzie who led the attack for Middlebury, each man scoring seven points. Sweet and Ashdown each accounted for four more, while Baumgartner and Hoyle added two apiece. Both teams were playing their second encounter, but the purple quintet was the stronger, smoother playing team and held the lead from the very start of the game. At no time was Middlebury able to come within winning distance, though they played a much better game in the second half than in the first.

Boston University

The third defeat of the season came in the next contest of the Blue and White courtmen. Traveling to Boston for a two-game trip, the Middlebury team went down to a 31-34 defeat at the hands of Boston University. Despite a final rally on the part of the Panther players, Boston was able to hold its slim three-point lead long enough to win the game. Middlebury led at the half time with a 20-18 margin but started the second half so slowly that Boston was able to score twelve points without a Middlebury rally being made. The last few minutes saw the Blue team staging a furious uphill battle which just failed to win out. Sweet was the high scorer for the Panther aggregation with nine points to his credit.

Northeastern

The second contest on the Boston trip was also a defeat for the Beckmen. This time it was administered at the hands of Northeastern to the tune of 29-43. Ashdown was the mainstay of the Middlebury team, scoring thirteen of the twenty-nine points for the Blue. The team was not up to form, being somewhat tired from their trip and the game the preceding evening. At no time throughout the game was Northeastern in danger of losing its lead.

St. Michael's

The first game of the state series was played against St. Michael's at Winooski on January 23, with the home team nosing out a one point victory, 21-22. A novel attack held the Panther players at bay during the first half with the result that St. Michael's led at the period by a 16-7 score. The second half marked a change in play on the part of the Middmen, changing from a zone to a man to man defense and gradually the score changed through a 17-17 tie to a close battle which ended 22-21 in favor of the Mikemen. Hoyle failed to make a foul shot in the last few seconds and Middlebury went down to its fifth defeat of the season and lost its first state series game.

Norwich

The Middlebury team dropped its sixth consecutive game when it lost the second of its state championship games, this time to Norwich. The final score was 26-25 in favor of the Cadets with the entire game being very closely contested, and Norwich
Sweet gets jump in 35-29 win over Tufts winning out only in the last few seconds of play. The game was played on a neutral court at Rutland and the victory gave Norwich the chance which later caused a tie between Middlebury and Norwich for the conference title.

Tufts

The Blue and White team broke through into the winning side of the column when they brought a strong and favored Tufts team down to defeat on the Middlebury court. The game ended with the score standing 35-29 in favor of Middlebury, despite the fact that the Tufts aggregation had not been previously defeated. The Middlebury passing attack brought them from the small end of a 19-15 score at the period into a lead which they held throughout the second half. Captain Ashdown and Sweet were the high scorers for Middlebury, scoring a total of fourteen and ten points respectively.

Massachusetts State

Apparently too sure of themselves after their unexpected victory over Tufts, the Middlebury five suffered its last defeat of the season at the hands of Mass. State when the game ended with the Massachusetts team leading, 24-20. Bush of Massachusetts was high scorer of the game, tallying eleven points while Ashdown led the Blue five with six and Chalmers and Sweet each scored five. Though Middlebury was first to score, the half ended with Mass. State leading 15-8. The Panther quintet tried desperately to overcome the lead in the final period, but the game ended with Mass. State still holding fast to a four point lead.

Vermont

The third state series game resulted in a victory for the Blue and White, with Middlebury topping Vermont by a 32-27 count. Sweet led the Panther team, scoring eleven points himself, bringing the team from behind at the opening of the second half and breaking a tie that resulted immediately after. MacKenzie was close behind Sweet with nine points to his credit. Exceptionally close officiating featured the game. Thirty fouls were committed during the contest, sixteen by Vermont and fourteen by Middlebury.
St. Michael's

Continuing the winning streak which was to last through the rest of the season, the Blue and White five crashed through to a second victory in the conference series by defeating St. Michael's at Middlebury, 32-25. Sweet and Corliss were the leaders of the Panther team, each scoring ten points. Hoyle scored eight of the others while Ashdown supplied the remaining four. The playing of Sweet, Corliss, and Hoyle was the outstanding feature of the game. The Blue team led the scoring with the exception of a few moments in the first half when Coach Beck played his reserves. As the regulars came in, however, the score mounted for Middlebury and the Blue and White gained and held the lead for the rest of the game.

Vermont

Middlebury defeated the University of Vermont in the fifth game of the state series by a 35-22 score. Ashdown led the Panther team in this contest, scoring fourteen points while Sweet and MacKenzie each scored eight. Vermont led by one point at the half time but in the second period the Blue attack broke down all resistance to win by a thirteen point margin. In the last eight minutes of play the Middlebury quintet scored fourteen points while their opponents scored but two. The excellent way in which Middlebury made use of its free throws was one reason for the large margin of victory.

Norwich

With the state series outcome hanging in the balance, Middlebury triumphed over Norwich on the Middlebury court with a 24-15 victory, thereby tying their opponents for the state championship. Corliss was by far the star of this contest, accounting for nine points besides playing a stellar game as guard. Sweet accounted for five of the remaining tallies with Chalmers and MacKenzie each scoring four points and Ashdown supplying the other two. Middlebury led throughout the entire game, the score standing 11-6 at half time.

PLAYING after almost negligible practice, and handicapped by lack of good ice facilities, Middlebury nevertheless won its ninth consecutive state title in hockey this year. With twelve games scheduled, the team was able to play only seven, due to unusual lack of ice throughout the entire season. The much disrupted and rearranged schedule eventually contained games with St. Michael's, whom Middlebury defeated twice; the University of Vermont, defeated once; Massachusetts State and Williams, both of whom defeated the blue and white team; Hamilton, shut out by the Panthers; and an alumni game which was a decisive victory for the undergraduates. The ultimate result was five games won, two lost, and a state championship gained.

The defeat Middlebury suffered at the hands of Massachusetts State College was the first home game the team has lost since 1925. The other home games this season were decided victories for the blue team with such scores as 23-2 against St. Michael's, 9-2 against University of Vermont, and 15-5 against the alumni. Middlebury scored a total of 64 goals in seven games, while their opponents' total reached 18.

The two defeats handed the St. Michael's team and the one victory over the University of Vermont clinched the state title for the panther pucksters. The second game with the green and gold was canceled on account of lack of ice, but this would not have made any difference in the final rating as Norwich refrained from entering a team this season.

Games scheduled with Cornell, Colgate, Connecticut Aggies, Vermont and Union were all canceled on account of inclement weather conditions. The winter was most unusual for Vermont and very disastrous as far as hockey was concerned. There was no period of consecutively good ice for practice sessions and games. The first trip of the season was canceled on account of rain. The game with Hamilton, however, being played later in the season, but Colgate and Cornell were of necessity dropped. A trip to Union and Williams was only half successful as the former game had to be canceled on account of poor ice.

St. Michael's

The season opened with the St. Michael's game at Winooski. There was a light rain falling throughout and the ice was practically melted by the time the game was concluded. Middlebury worked its passing attack to good advantage with the result that the blue and white team, heavily outweighing the St. Michael's sextet, was able...
Goering makes save in Massachusetts State game to score quite frequently. When the game ended the score stood 12-2 in favor of Middlebury. Makela accounted for six goals, Nelson and Yeomans for two each, and Melbye and Bakeman added one apiece to the total.

Vermont

The second game of the season was played on equally poor ice, this time on the Middlebury rink, with the University of Vermont as the opponent. The ice was in such poor condition that after a few minutes of play holes began to appear which greatly handicapped not only the passing and skating, but the speed of the game. Middlebury emerged the victor in this contest with nine goals to their credit while Vermont was only able to score two. Makela again led the scoring with three goals, while Nelson and Yeomans each added two goals to the total. Pickens and Melbye were successful to the extent of one tally.

St. Michael's

The third game of the schedule, played on February 10, was also the third and final series game in which the Panther sextet engaged. From this contest, staged on the Middlebury rink, St. Michael's was sent home on the small end of a 23-2 score. Although the Middlebury team showed a decided lack of practice, the ice was somewhat better than in the game a few days before and the Panther attack was able to function well. The visiting team was entirely outclassed in all respects. As in the two preceding games, Makela was high scorer, netting a total of nine goals. Melbye came second with four, Captain Nelson scored three, as did Yeomans, Pickens scored two, and MacLean and Viehman each did their bit with one each.

Massachusetts State

Middlebury suffered its first defeat of the season, and incidentally the first home defeat since 1925, at the hands of Massachusetts State on February 13 in the fourth game of the season. The final score was 4-1 in favor of Massachusetts State. Handicapped by the lack of practice, by the fact that they were playing on the town rink without the customary sideboards, and by the fact that two men were injured in the game, Middlebury's offensive was unable to function to the extent of scoring more than once. The visitors drew first blood, but after hard passing and playing, Yeomans sank the only Middlebury goal from in front of the net. The Bay Staters scored twice in the first period and once in each of the others.
Williams

On February 17 the blue and white sextet suffered an unexpected defeat at the hands of a powerful Williams aggregation. The score stood 3-1 in favor of the home team at the end of the game. The Middlebury men were hampered with injuries, Pickens, Bakeman and Melbye all being on the invalid list and unable to do much playing. Makela scored the only goal of the game for Middlebury. This was the second and final defeat the Panther sextet received during the season.

Alumni

During the annual home-coming week-end an alumni team skated out to meet the varsity and then skated back at the low end of a 15-5 defeat. Captain Crocker of last year led the alumni against the varsity team, but the grads were unable to function well enough to cause much trouble. Makela again showed his superior shooting ability by scoring eight of the fifteen goals for the blue and white. Captain Nelson scored four others and Yeomans scored the remaining three.

Hamilton

The final game of the season was played against Hamilton College after having been postponed from the start of the schedule. The contest was played at Clinton on February 23 and Middlebury emerged the victor with a 3-0 score. The ice in this game was the best the team had played on all season. Perfect hockey conditions were in existence and the team was in good shape. The resulting score of a shut-out over the powerful Hamilton sextet, after an exceedingly fast game, showed the real strength of the Panther aggregation. Yeomans scored two of the Middlebury goals while Makela accounted for the third.

The four high scorers of the season were Makela, Yeomans, Captain Nelson and Melbye in the order named. Makela accounted for a total of 28 goals out of 64 tallies made during the season. Yeomans was second with 13, Nelson was third with 11 and Melbye was fourth with six.

Next year's season should be equally successful as there will not be too great a loss by graduation. Captain Nelson and Makela, both stars this year, will be graduated, as will Bakeman and Viehman; but there are others in reserve who have been used somewhat and can step into their places.

The Season

Coach Hessler faced a real problem at the opening of the 1931 baseball season when he found the team without an experienced pitcher and with many of its hardest hitters lost by graduation. The pitching problem handicapped the team all season, for although three promising freshmen were developed, none of the men were able to come through consistently. The season was not successful in games won and lost, as the team dropped ten games and could win but six. The inability to hit decisively characterized the Panther playing in most of the games and explains the low winning percentage.

The season was opened April 25 against Ithaca College on Porter Field. Ashdown pitched the team to a 4-2 victory in a well-played but weak-hitting game.

The following week the squad took their first Massachusetts trip. Williams knocked Ashdown out of the box to win the first contest 7-3. Stefaniak started the game with Springfield and was batted hard, losing 11-6. Markowski, who relieved Stefaniak in the second encounter, pitched the third, losing to Massachusetts State in the ninth inning, 6-5.

Coming home for the first state series game, the Blue and White played very raggedly, but won from St. Mike’s, 17-16, because their opponents were just a little bit worse. Each team made seven errors.

The Junior Week games with Vermont and Norwich saw the Panther team playing more smoothly, but not hitting well enough to match their opponents. With Rutkowski on the mound, the Catamounts were invincible and won by a 9-0 score. Norwich played raggedly in the Saturday game, but made seven hits off Olson to win 6-3.

A second Massachusetts trip resulted in a victory and two defeats for the Blue. Boston University edged out a 1-0 win when the game was halted by rain after the fifth inning. The Tufts game could not be played on account of rain. Northeastern fell before the Panther 6-4, as Stefaniak kept nine hits well separated. Providence got eleven hits off Olson’s delivery to win the final game, 7-4.

In the return game at Winooski, St. Michael’s proved an easy victim as Anderson set them down with three hits and got a single, double and triple himself to score a 4-0 victory.

Next, two undefeated teams visited Middlebury in two days, but only one left with its string unbroken. When Olson weakened in the final innings, Tufts squeezed out a 9-8 triumph in a loose game. The following day Stefaniak held Clarkson scoreless until the ninth inning when the Blue and White won 4-2.

The Panther made a much better showing in the return game with Vermont. Although again shut out, 3-0, Middlebury got eight hits off Rutkowski this time, while the Catamounts were making ten off Olson and Stefaniak.

Middlebury crept into a tie for second in the state standings with a ten inning 5-4 victory over Norwich on Memorial Day. Stefaniak outlasted Stufflebeam, who allowed only three hits in seven innings, while the Panther tied up the score in the ninth and won out on Yeoman’s triple and Makela’s single.

St. Lawrence captured the Senior Week game by a 5-3 score when Anderson got poor support and the team failed to hit in the pinches.

At the time of writing this the 1932 baseball season has not as yet opened and so it is not possible to include here any results of the games that will have been played or any comparative scores of the Blue and White team and their opponents.

The Middlebury season this year includes games with Springfield, Amherst, St. Michael's, Boston University, University of Vermont, Williams, Norwich, Brown, Boston College and Northeastern. This schedule includes three teams which were not encountered last year, namely Amherst, Brown and Boston College. It also omits games that were played during the last season with such teams as Ithaca School of Physical Education, Massachusetts State College, Tufts, Providence, Clarkson and St. Lawrence.

As has already been said, it is impossible to predict here anything in the line of the outcome of the season. The most we can do is to outline the chances of the team on the basis of the players. Last year the team lacked an adequate pitching staff, although Olson and Stefaniak, both freshmen at the time, developed in the latter part of the season into fairly powerful hurlers. Ashdown and Markowski, both of whom were on the mound last year, will be here again this season, together with Olson and Stefaniak.

In addition to these men there are members of the freshman class, among whom the best seems to be Barker, who should turn into good material for the delivering end of Coach Hessier’s battery. The receiving end will in all probability be again taken care of by Hartrey, who has held the berth for one entire season and most of his Freshman year besides.

Nelson will still be on hand to cover first base, while Murphy and Yeomans are again available for the positions of second and shortstop respectively. Sorensen and Goering are both present to cover the third base position, having alternated there last year.

In the outfield we again find the same lineup as last year. Captain Makela will hold down center field, Olson and Dumas in all probability filling right and left fields respectively, as they did last year.

So we can see that the same team is back in uniform this year, not a position having been left vacant. It is only to be expected, of course, that there will be other men candidating for the various positions on the team, members of the freshman class and those who have previously been on the squad as well. Just what the freshman class will turn out in the way of baseball players is unknown although some of them have shown unusual promise in early season practice sessions.

This year the team has changed the precedent of preceding years with regard to the Junior week games. It has been the custom in the past to have two baseball games and a track meet during the period of festivities, but this was impossible this year so the baseball team will meet three opponents, namely, U. V. M., Williams and Norwich, all on the Porter Field diamond.

On the whole, considering the fact that an unbroken line-up from last year is again eligible to play, considering also that there will be new candidates for the team, it seems safe to prophesy that the 1932 season of the Middlebury baseball team will, in all probability, be a very successful one.

1931 Season

Although the Blue track team lost three of their five meets during the 1931 season, the overwhelming victory in the State championship meet was sufficient to make the year a success.

A long period of preparation, begun on the board track during the winter months, was one of the reasons for the good showing of the team. The decathlon and inter-fraternity relays helped to give Coach Brown an idea of the available material.

The first contest in which any Middlebury men competed was the Eastern Intercollegiate Indoor meet. Boyd Brown was the only Middlebury entry, but his first place in the broad jump gave Middlebury a sixth in the meet.

As soon as the weather permitted, the squad commenced their outdoor practice at Porter field. A large number reported for practice, including the veterans Captain Paul, Affleck, Bibby, Brown, Hanson, Harwood, MacLean and Thayer. From the incoming class came several men with promising prep school records.

In their first dual meet of the season, Middlebury was defeated by Williams, 84 1/2-50 1/2. The Panthers scored clean sweeps in the broad jump and half-mile run, and took the first two places in the two-mile race. Two new Middlebury records were made in this meet, Jerry Thayer setting a new time in the 880 of 2:05 and Les Lovell exceeding all previous efforts in the javelin throw with a cast of 164 feet 6 inches. Sears captured the two-mile run with a fine sprint to the tape.

A powerful track team from the Springfield Y. M. C. A. college next defeated Captain Paul’s men. First places in all but two of the fifteen events enabled the Gymnasts to amass a total of 98 1/3 points to Middlebury’s 36 2/3. Thayer came through for a victory in the half, and Brown led the Middlebury men to a clean sweep in the broad jump. Fallon and MacLean were the other high scorers for the Blue. Gainsby, of Springfield, broke the Eastern Intercollegiate record in the javelin throw.

Weakness in the field events cost Coach Brown’s men their third meet of the season, Colby winning by a score of 72-65. For the third time Brown led the Panther broad jumpers to a clean sweep in this event. Thayer again scored a win in the half, with Fallon, who had already won the 440, in second place. Bibby took a first and second in the dashes; Sears won the two-mile run; MacLean took seconds in both the high and low hurdles, and MacKenzie, Paul and Schoonmaker scored in the pole vault and high jump. The visitors, however, made a clean sweep of three field events, and scored first in two others.

In the Intercollegiates, the Blue and White track men finished sixth. Captain Paul tied for first place in the pole vault, MacLean took a second in the 120-yard high hurdles, Thayer and Brown scored thirds in the half-mile and broad jump respectively.

Coming into their own against Vermont and Norwich, the Middlebury team swept to a decisive victory, gathering a total of 82 1/2 out of a possible 135 points. Due to a heavy rain, the meet was held at Burlington, where the track was in better condition than the one at Porter field. MacLean, who won both hurdles, and Fallon, who won both the 440 and 880, were the stars of the meet. The Panther aggregation took ten firsts, with clean sweeps in the mile and two-mile runs, eight seconds and eight thirds.

A 79-56 victory over Rensselaer, featured by MacLean’s new college record of 26.4 seconds in the 220-yard low hurdles, wound up the Blue track season. Although the Panthers scored first in every running event except the 220-yard dash, the Engineers’ strength in the field prevented the contest from being a walkaway.
For its 1932 season the Middlebury track team will have six meets, two of them being run off on Porter field and the other four away.

As usual, the first meet of the season was held at Williamstown with Williams. It was expected that Middlebury would again suffer a defeat at the hands of the Purple as the Blue team is still weak in the weight events, the cause of their defeat last year. Williams on the other hand is just as strong, if not stronger, than last year in these events.

The second meet of the season, held on April 30, was with the Montreal A. A., an organization of men interested in amateur athletics in Montreal. They have several times placed runners on the Olympic teams, so it is natural that Middlebury would encounter very stiff opposition from the Canadian club. Just how stiff this competition would be could not of course be determined ahead of time as the Canadian organization has a much wider range of material than the Blue and White.

On May 7 the first home track meet was held, Middlebury meeting Boston University at Porter field on that date. Middlebury and Boston University rate about equal from early season contests and from last year's results of the two teams, so that a close contest was guaranteed.

During Junior Week, the regular custom of having a home meet having been given up in favor of the intercollegiates, Middlebury will send a delegation to Worcester to take part in these Eastern intercollegiates that are held annually. The Panther squad does not consider this meet very important as only a few of the strongest men on the team are sent to the contests. Last year the Blue and White took sixth place through the efforts of MacLean, Paul, Thayer and Brown.

On May 21 the team will encounter Union at Schenectady. Last year's comparative scores might not mean very much, but they indicate that the Panther team was stronger than Union, although the two did not meet, and both teams as relatively as strong this year. This should give the Blue and White athletes a slight edge on the Union team.

The final meet of the season will be triangular, as usual, in the form of a state meet, this year to be held at Burlington. For several years Middlebury has very easily and with a large margin won this meet. This year there is practically a surety of the act being repeated but with a possible smaller margin of victory than previously. Norwich has turned out some good sprinters and some good weight men while Middlebury is still weak in the weights. Vermont will probably be the closest contender with Middlebury for she has strengthened her running events considerably.

The team itself is about equal in strength to last year's group. Captain Bibby, consistent winner in the sprints last year, is going strong with Brown again ably supporting him. Brown also is again upholding his end on the broad jump and the weights. New sprinters are being developed in the persons of Cady, Prochazka and Wintersteen, who are showing remarkable promise.

The distance is again strong. Harwood, ex-captain of cross country, is still running distance. Chase was last year's champion in the mile and is still running.
Fallon is following last year's winning stride in the half and quarter. Hunter, a freshman, is also turning in good times in the distance and middle distance races, and Munford is going well in the half.

MacLean, Hoyle and Banta, all last year's experienced men, with MacLean holding a record, are again doing their work on the hurdles. The field events are fair with weakness in the high jump, pole vault and weights. The javelin is again in the competent hands of Lovell and Erkkila, both of whom last year passed the former college record.

On the whole, the 1932 track season, both what has already been completed and that which is to come, promises a very successful year, a state championship is almost assured, and a well trained team for next year is guaranteed.

MINOR SPORTS
The 1931 tennis team was one of the strongest ever to represent Middlebury College. Led by Captain Sloper, '32, and Flagg, '34, the Blue and White netmen ended the season with six victories and only two defeats.

The Blue and White opened the season at Winooski and easily won from St. Michael's by a score of 6—0. The same week Middlebury annexed three victories in as many days, by trampling over St. Lawrence, 8—1, New York State Teachers College, 5—1, and Vermont 4—2. The feature of the week was Flagg's win from Captain Tupper, Vermont's number one man. A return match with Vermont resulted in another Middlebury victory, 4—2.

The next scheduled contest was with St. Michael's but was postponed because of rain. The next two matches, played away from home, were the only two lost during the season. Union defeated the Middlebury players 9—0 and Colgate handed them a 7—2 defeat. A 6—0 win over St. Michael's concluded the state matches as well as the season and Middlebury was once more state champions.
After winning three out of its first four meets of the season by overwhelming scores, the Middlebury cross-country team lost the Green Mountain Conference title for the first time since 1927.

The Panther runners were victorious in their first meet of the season, defeating Williams at Williamstown, by the perfect score of 15—40. The second meet with St. Stephens, on the new Middlebury course, was also handily won by the Panthers, this time with a score of 16—39. The winning streak of the harriers was broken the next week when Springfield College defeated them by the score of 35—20. The following Saturday, Middlebury defeated Rensselaer on the home course by the score of 17—38. Five blue runners finished in the first six places and an official record of 31 minutes and fifty-three seconds was set by Captain Harwood and James Sears, who tied for first place.

In the final meet of the season, the Middlebury runners lost to the University of Vermont by the score of 33—22, the race being run on the Vermont course. This was the only meet of the season in which a Middlebury man did not place first.
The freshman harriers lost their only meet of the season to the University of Vermont freshmen over a three-mile course at Burlington, by a 24—31 score. The Panther cubs were handicapped by the absence of William Hunter, undoubtedly the best freshman runner, who had consistently turned in the best times in early practice trials. Hurley of Vermont led the teams over the course to finish in sixteen minutes and eighteen seconds and was followed by Seelye and Norton of Middlebury. Rogers of Vermont was fourth and was followed by Southworth (V), Merchant (V), Beers (M), Carrascila (V), Costaldo (M), Bourne (M), Haines (M), Bona (M). The Vermont frosh captured the state title by virtue of this victory.

The Women's Athletic Association is an organization to which all women participating in athletics are eligible. Its purpose is to promote interest in athletics and to supervise all activities in that field. The association offers a varied program of interclass competition. There are four "seasons" in the course of the year: major sports, hockey and basketball; minor sports, baseball, volleyball, tennis, and archery.

W.A.A. sponsors a point system whereby those girls participating in the various games receive a definite amount of credit. The class winning the greatest number of matches in a sport is considered champion; each member of the championship team receives extra points in addition to those which are earned on her class team.

At the end of the season the athletic council, with the aid of the class captains, elects an All-Midd team, composed of the best players of all four classes. These girls receive an "MC" in the form of a monogram.
Although baseball was well supported by the underclassmen, the general lack of upper-class interest has caused W.A.A. to make this a minor instead of a major sport.

Last spring, so few upperclassmen turned out that the juniors and seniors were forced to combine into a single team. The field was in good condition, and the weather was fair for the majority of the games, so that only a few of the matches were played in the gym. Whether the indoor playing handicapped the upperclassmen, or whether the freshmen were really superior, we cannot say. However, the fact remains that the class team of '34 gained their coveted numerals by beating the sophomores 7—6, in the last and most exciting game of the season.

Although all the teams played well, the class of '34 has established an especially fine reputation in baseball.

Although the basketball season was considerably lengthened by the vaccination epidemic, enthusiasm and interest did not diminish, as was evidenced by the threat of a triple tie for championship honors.

Under the leadership of Alice Cady, '32, a schedule of twenty-four games, comprising both first and second team contests, was completed.

Due to the coaching of Wilhelmina Haley and Marjorie Paul the season was featured by accurate passwork. The majority of games were won by close scores and, until the last one was finished, championship honors were almost divided between the three lower classes.

Volleyball

Under the direction of Anna Omwake, '32, the 1931 volleyball season consisted of two rounds of hard-fought games. The closest contests were those played between the seniors and sophomores, whose race for second place honors finally remained undecided.

Each class was also represented by a second team whose regular schedule of games necessitated as much vigorous playing as that of the first team. The volleyball championship was won for the second successive time by the class of '33. The junior team again demonstrated the same skill in serving and the same accuracy in passing which was responsible for its former victories.

Nine players were chosen from the first teams to become members of the All-Midd team. These players were picked for their all-round excellence in this sport.

The 1931 hockey season was bigger and better than ever before. Never have spectators given such enthusiastic support to their class teams. Twelve games were scheduled by Eisa Smith, '32, head of hockey, all of which were hard-fought. The juniors were determined to regain the title which they lost to the seniors last year. A fast forward line aided by a strong backfield proved too good a combination for the opposing teams, and the efforts of the juniors were rewarded by the championship.

The annual hockey bonfire, which officially ends the season, was held November 17. The feature of the day was an exhibition match between the sister classes which was won by the senior-sophomore combination. At this time the All-Middlebury team was announced; selection was based on outstanding ability, good sportsmanship, and the faithful observance of the W.A.A. training rules.

Hiking Club

This year there has been a renewed interest in the hiking club, quite apart from any that has been shown in the past. Early last fall, the club started its activities, which included hikes to Chipman Hill, the cider mill, and the Morgan horse farm. Similar outings are being planned this spring by Rosemary Faris, '34, head of hiking.

The hiking club should not be confused with the newly-formed Mountain Club. Its excursions are usually confined to the immediate vicinity of Middlebury, for the benefit of those who like to walk, but who have neither the time nor the strength for all-day outings. It is an opportunity to liberate one's own vitality.

Tennis

The annual spring tennis tournament, which is open to all Middlebury women, stirred up much interest and friendly rivalry this year. Barbara Landis, '32, head of tennis, received many entries for the tournament, the winner of which is acknowledged champion of the women's college.

Competitive spirit and evenly matched players produced several close sets. Zavart Markarian, '33, and Winifred Webster, '31, played in the finals, from which the former emerged successfully, by winning straight sets of 6—1, 6—2. She was awarded a cup in recognition of her ability.

Inasmuch as the tennis season is a very short one in the fall, a ladder tournament was held. The purpose of this tournament is not mainly competitive, rather, the aim is to retain interest in tennis and also to show the improvement made during the summer.

Archery

Since its revival two years ago, archery has become an increasingly popular sport at Middlebury. Last fall a large number of participants were present for practices and Carol McNeely, '33, head of archery, had the idea of arranging a tournament to restore the popularity of the sport. This proved a great stimulus to the tryouts. Anna Tuthill, '34, was the best shot among the contestants, and thereby gained the title of champion.

Archery has continued throughout the winter months, and due to constant indoor practice, the archers are now ready to engage in the spring tournament. Plans are under way to send a representative to the national meet at Deerfield, Massachusetts, where she may compete with members from other colleges. The success of this season has laid great hopes for the future.

--[231]--
Acting on the principle that the real college exists just as much outside of the lecture hall as in the courses themselves, Middlebury has long stressed student participation in varied activities. The wide range offered here has been an attraction of the college since its infant years. For example, experience in journalism is made possible through work on the several publications, The Kaleidoscope originated as a senior book in 1874, and was published by the graduating class each year until '82, when the juniors took it over. Other annuals such as the Souvenir and Laurea have appeared at intervals. The Campus began as the Undergraduate in 1839, and continued existing as an unsuccessful literary organ until 1905, when regular issues of the Campus began. Dramatics attracted some attention, but its present status is something comparatively recent. It is interesting to note that the same college that tied Harvard also supported a chess and checker club.

THE KALEIDOSCOPE is the official yearbook of Middlebury College and is published annually by the Junior Class during the first or second week in May. Its executive body consists of an Editor-in-Chief and a Business Manager together with an Associate Editor and an Associate Manager, each being chosen by a class election during the second semester of their sophomore year.

Last year a new system of election for board members was installed. Under this plan, which is sponsored by Pi Delta Epsilon, the honorary journalistic fraternity, a call is issued at the beginning of the school year for tryouts from the sophomore class. These candidates signify their intention of competing for the positions on the staff and then aid the various department heads in much of the routine work. The candidates must attend all Board meetings which are held practically every Sunday throughout the school year, but they have neither voice nor vote in the proceedings.

A competitive examination is held by the editor in conjunction with Pi Delta Epsilon the latter part of March. Candidates who have the highest averages and outstanding ability are recommended to the class for election to the four offices within its jurisdiction. The remainder of the staff is selected by the newly elected executive board with the advise and consent of the previous board.

The history of the KALEIDOSCOPE is, indeed, interesting and eventful. Since its establishment in 1874, the book has evolved from a forty-eight page review of the college to the volume as it now exists—a three hundred-page book which is well documented with editorial material together with a pictorial review of the undergraduate year.

In this, the thirty-seventh edition of the KALEIDOSCOPE, we have tried to present Middlebury student life and activities as we have seen them. It has also been our purpose to make the book as different as possible from those of past years. It is thus that many new features have been inaugurated such as a Junior Class section in which the individual pictures have been increased in size and the layout completely changed. Uniformity among the Junior women has been obtained by the use of velvet drapes. A sixteen-page view section has been printed on a linen finish, translucent stock in midnight blue.

However, throughout these past years the KALEIDOSCOPE has not received the official recognition which it merits. Perhaps this was excusable in the days when the book was merely for the Junior Class; now, none the less, it is truly a college annual and is of direct interest to all four classes of graduates.

The other Middlebury publications—the CAMPUS and SAXONIAN—are financed by means of a publication fee which forms part of the semester bill. Under this system it has been possible for these publications to become worthy literary organs of the college. Yet it is important to note that the KALEIDOSCOPE, in spite of the severe handicap which is placed upon it as regards subscription campaigns, has nevertheless greatly improved each year. With the publication of the present volume we firmly believe that the book should obtain the official recognition of the administration and be included in the college publication fee.

The Middlebury Campus is the official undergraduate newspaper of the college. Founded in 1830 as the Undergraduate, it has gradually increased in size and is at present an eight-page, five-column paper, which is published each Wednesday afternoon of the college year.

Under the editorship of Reamer Kline, the Campus has had for the first time in many years a definite and progressive editorial policy. It has been most critical throughout the entire progress of the application of the policy, but this criticism has always been constructive and has worked for the best interests of Middlebury College.

First, there was discussed to some length the present marking system, the causes for their wide discrepancies in different courses, the place of the "snap" in the college curriculum, and the results of awarding scholastic honors upon numerical ranking alone.

Second, an effort was made to increase the importance of intramural sports, considering them the truest force working for what should be the goal of all college athletics. The advisability of awarding a standard letter for all major and minor sports was strongly advocated.

Third, the present disproportionate participation in college activities was opposed, and a system was advocated that would limit the number of activities in which any individual may engage during a given college year, and which would work for the participation of the entire student body in this field.

Of the thirty editorials that appeared under this Campus administration eighteen dealt with some phase of this preannounced policy and the remaining twelve were discussions of college news. During the six weeks between the inauguration of the editorial policy and commencement, each of the three points was elaborated in considerable detail. Marking standards were discussed in two editorials, athletics in one, and college activities in two. A consideration of the place of the college graduate in the world of business depression rounded out this first period of the Campus year.

During the fall the fraternity and its rushing problems, as they affect both the organization and the freshman, were discussed in two editorials, one at the beginning and one at the end of the rushing season. Diversions from the fixed path of the paper's policy were made for the purpose of considering the place of religion in college, struggle between individualism and conformity in the minds of the students, the problem of drinking on the part of the returning alumni, and the college student's reason for Thanksgiving. The athletic policy of the paper was given further attention, once when it became necessary to direct attention to the true values of college athletics as questioned by an alumni communication; and twice as the progress of the football season brought up situations deserving comment. Reversion was then made to the problem of control of college activities, when the Saxonian centered upon the faults of the honor societies. The last editorial prior to Christmas was in the nature of summary, and attempted to group together all the false values existent in college and point out the nature of each.

With the beginning of the new calendar year and approach of the second semester the Campus viewed the curricular errors of the average undergraduate and typified by the mistakes of the first semester, sought remedies. An amplification of the paper's policy in regard to activities followed, in which the place of dramatics as an educative activity was discussed. The administration's stand in the matter was then presented.
A new policy was inaugurated by the editors of the 1931-32 Saxonian. The number of issues was increased from four to six and the scope of the publication enlarged by the inclusion of articles discussing various college problems. In its new form, the periodical proved very successful.

Named in honor of John Godfrey Saxe, '39, Middlebury's best-known poet, the magazine was founded by the English Club in 1921. Voluntary contributions from the student body provide the material for the publication, which is directed by a board of editors, assisted by a member of the faculty.

Members of the board are selected on the basis of literary ability or activity on the business staff.

The proverbial greenness of the incoming classes has been lessened during the past few years by the publication of a volume officially known as the Middlebury College Handbook, but more commonly termed the "Frosh Bible." Pi Delta Epsilon and the Student Government Association cooperate in publishing this book, which is distributed to all members of the freshman class.

Included in the Handbook are a history of the college, an explanation of the Middlebury traditions, freshman pointers, rushing rules, information concerning all campus activities, constitutions and by-laws of the Undergraduate Association and Student Government Association, and a directory of administrative officers and faculty members. The section containing the Middlebury songs and cheers is in large measure responsible for the prominence of the volume at the first rallies.

Contributions from Pi Delta Epsilon, the Women's Athletic Association, the Student Government Association, and the Pan Hellenic Association, in addition to the advertising by local merchants, made possible the financial success of the Handbook.

The Press Club of Middlebury College, founded ten years ago by Prof. Wilfred E. Davison, has again become active under the direction of W. Storrs Lee, editor of college publications. The club was re-established in 1930 with the aim of service to Middlebury in acting as a publicity bureau for the college. In this the club has been increasingly successful by gaining a better news representation for the college in the daily press.

Other undertakings of the club include the making of a permanent record of all college releases issued, the collection of over five hundred cuts which are available to all students and the assemblance of the "Mem Book" which contains programs, pictures and write-ups of all campus activities.

ORGANIZATIONS
The Undergraduate Association

The Undergraduate Association is a student organization, composed of all the members of the men's college, and acting through its executive board, the Student Council.

It proposes to preserve and regulate traditional customs of Middlebury, to encourage student activities, and to foster a spirit of good fellowship and friendliness in the men's college.

Nominations for president are made by a selected senior group, comprising one member from each fraternity and one from the neutral body. Other nominations may be made only upon petition of twenty-five per cent of the members-at-large. The election itself is decided by a majority vote of the entire association. The vice-president, secretary and treasurer are elected by the Student Council from its own members.

Meetings may be called by the President of the Association, by the Student Council, or by a petition of two-fifths of the undergraduate body.

The Student Government Association functions not only as a governing body of the women's college, but also acts as a medium between the faculty and the student body. It assists in carrying out the traditions established by the college and promotes a social atmosphere of mutual enjoyment and fellowship throughout the college years. The purpose of the association as stated by the constitution is to encourage self-control, responsibility, and loyalty within the student body.

While the legislative power is placed in the hands of the association as a whole, the executive power is given to a council which is composed of one representative from each class, two representatives from the house chairmen, and the officers, all chosen by popular election.

The Student Life Committee

The Student Life Committee is a student-faculty organization, having under its guidance the social policies of the college. It is composed of the President of the Undergraduate Association, the President of the Student Government Association, the Dean of the Men’s College, the Dean of the Women’s College, and a member of the faculty appointed by the President of the College.

The regulation of college dances, entertainments, and all social gatherings is in the hands of the committee. Schedules of musical, dramatic and similar organizations are submitted for their approval, their action toward such being similar to that of the Athletic Council in athletic matters. No new organization may be created without first having met the approval of the committee.

Because of the character of the membership, both the student and faculty point of view is available on all problems dealing with the social life of the campus. During its existence of five years, the Student Life Committee has proven highly successful.

The Student Council

The Student Council assumes a position of great importance on the campus, for not only is it the executive board of the Undergraduate Association, but the actions of all organizations and individuals in the men's college are accountable to it as well.

The most important function of this group is to acquaint the freshmen with the traditions of Middlebury, to enforce the freshmen rules, and to conduct the Frosh P-Rade each year at the home game of the state series in football.

Any new society wishing to form at Middlebury must present to the Student Council its purpose and ideals for their approval, and it is not legitimate as an organization until this has been obtained.

The decisions of the Council are enforced through the president of the Undergraduate Association, and its suggestions carried out through his action rather than that of the body itself.

Its membership includes the president of the Undergraduate Association, who acts as chairman, the president of each of the four classes, the presidents of Blue Key, "M" Club, and Waubanakee, with an additional representative from Pi Delta Epsilon.

Waubanakee

Middlebury bestows her highest honor for ability and service in college activities by membership in Waubanakee. It was established in 1911 as a self-perpetuating, honorary society, and is composed of the leading men of each senior class.

The organization combines the function of the other societies of the men's college, for, as would be expected, its members have been prominent in the work of these other groups.

Members are recognized by the gold pin in the shape of a tomahawk, and the soft black hats bearing the same insignia in red.

Election from the junior class takes place near the end of the year, and pledging or tapping of Waubanakees occurs before the first event of Junior Week, which is usually a home baseball game. The ceremony is quite unusual and of great interest to the entire college.

Blue Key was established at Middlebury in the spring of 1930 in connection with the national Key movement. Members of athletic teams visiting other colleges were impressed by the hospitality of the Key Societies and felt the need of an active organization with definite functions here at Middlebury. With this in view it was decided to abandon Sage and Delta Tau, junior and sophomore honorary societies, and to establish Blue Key to take the place of both.

The organization holds itself under obligation to perform all possible services for the good of the college, and is especially concerned with insuring a cordial welcome to members of visiting teams.

Elections from the three upper classes are made after the Easter recess, the office to be held until graduation.

It is a self-supporting organization and is empowered to sell frosh hats, rule cards and athletic programs—the latter printed in conjunction with Pi Delta Epsilon. Informals given at the gym are another important source of revenue. The Key has become one of the most powerful organizations of the men’s college, and commands great respect from the undergraduate body.

The Banshee Chapter of Mortar Board, national senior women's honorary society, was installed in Middlebury, May 27, 1928. Banshee, the old local society, was founded in Middlebury in 1912. Its members were not to exceed twelve and were to be selected as those women of the Junior class "most popular and most representative of Middlebury."

The purpose of Mortar Board, as stated in the preamble of the constitution, is "to provide for the cooperation between women's honorary societies, to promote college loyalty and to stimulate a finer type of college woman." Service, scholarship and leadership are the objectives of the organization, and it is upon these qualifications that members of Mortar Board are chosen.

Each year Mortar Board has a service program by which it endeavors to carry out its purpose.

This year's program includes an attempt to establish closer connections with the chapter at the University of Vermont, cooperation with the Dean of Women in vocational guidance work, and the sponsoring of talks by worth-while speakers who may visit the campus.

Women’s Debating Club

A greater interest among the students, a larger schedule, and the holding of informal debates throughout the year widened the scope of the debating club this year and resulted in a most successful season.

At the beginning of the season twenty-three women tried out before the debating council for positions on the varsity team. The six most outstanding women were chosen, three to represent the college on the Boston trip, the remaining three to work with the varsity and thereby gain experience.

Tryouts were held before each group of debates, giving everyone an opportunity to participate. In addition, informal debates were held during the year, in order that everyone interested in the activity might have some experience in debating. Competition was unusually keen and the judges based their selections on refutation ability as well as on presentation.

Due to the absence of the faculty coach, debating has been in undergraduate hands, assisted by the debating council, which is composed of Professors Cook, Harrington, Rusby, Sholes and Womack.

Debates were held with Keene Normal School, Bates College, University of Vermont, New York University, and the New Jersey State College for Women. Two of the popular questions debated were “Resolved that the Nations Adopt a Free Trade Policy” and “Resolved that the United States Should Recognize Soviet Russia.”
The "M" Club consists of all members of the men's college who have won a varsity letter in a major sport: football, baseball, basketball, hockey, or track. Although the club was established quite recently, members of the alumni who fulfill requirements are also included.

The club undertakes the task of supplying letters and sweaters to successful athletes, and fosters a friendly spirit in college sports.

The work of the club is financed by informals at the gym and a minstrel show given in the spring.

The dances give the students an opportunity to meet informally, and are consequently well attended. The minstrel show, started in 1930, has proved to be quite popular as well as a good source of revenue.

The Women's "M" Club, founded in 1928, is composed of those women who have earned 1,000 points in various sports and have received their "M" sweater. Membership is based on sportsmanship and posture, and means that a girl has played on an All-Midd or championship team. The organization endeavors to foster participation in athletics on the women’s campus, and upholds the standards of sportsmanship and leadership.

Le Cercle Français

Le Cercle Français est un club ouvert à toutes les jeunes filles et à tous les jeunes gens du collège. Son but principal est de donner aux étudiants l’occasion de parler et d’entendre parler la langue française. Il est affilié à "l’Alliance Française," organisation internationale.

Les réunions ont lieu une fois par mois au Château. La première réunion consiste toujours en un pique-nique à Chipman Hill. Elle est suivie pendant l’année par des soirées intéressantes, pendant lesquelles on offre des programmes de musique, des pièces, et des jeux auxquels les étudiants participent.

The Middlebury College Band

The band has become one of the major factors of the student life at Middlebury, and has been steadily improving under the capable leadership of Mr. Lechnyr of Burlington. All members of the men's college who can play a musical instrument are urged to attend the first rehearsal which is held early in the first week of the school year, and we have reason to be proud of the large number who respond. Its first appearance is made at Middlebury Night, the initial informal get-together of the men's college. They always make a decided hit there, and continue their fine work throughout the year, playing at all home games and rallies.

This year they accompanied the football team to Burlington, and proceeding down the field in their new uniforms of blue and white capes and oversea caps, made a pleasing contrast with the yellow and olive green of the rival school. At such times the tribute of each band to the opposing team does much to relieve the tension between the two groups.

The band brings the season to a close with a concert on the lower campus during Senior Week, and by leading the Commencement procession.

The college orchestra is an organization open to all students who are proficient in the use of some musical instrument. An excellent opportunity for increasing their musical ability, as well as for developing an appreciation of the classics and for practical experience, is offered to any students interested in this activity.

Under the direction of Professor Alfred Larsen weekly rehearsals are held and a program of classical music is presented each year.

Middlebury College Glee Club

The Glee Club is one of the most outstanding organizations at the college and has always proved to be one of the leading musical clubs in New England. The past six years marked successful participation in the annual New England Intercollegiate Glee Club contest which was scheduled this year to be held in Symphony Hall, Boston, Massachusetts. Due to present economic conditions, the contest had to be called off at a late date, but it is hoped that next winter they will once again be continued.

Approximately forty men rehearse during the entire first semester in preparation for the engagements which follow. During the past season the club was well received on its annual New York trip as well as in the home concert which was held late in April.

Owing to the fact that no Boston trip was held, the New York engagements were lengthened to a full week. Concerts given on the trip which began March 16 included Bennington, Vermont; New Brighton, Staten Island; and the International House in New York City. Radio broadcasts were given from stations WOR in Newark, New Jersey, and WJZ in New York.

An important feature of the New York trip was the recording of two selections of the Club by the Columbia Phonograph Company of New York. The record was placed on general sale and met with wide approval.

Women’s Glee Club

Since 1929 the Women’s Glee Club, under the direction of Miss Prudence Fish, has held an increasingly prominent place in the women’s campus. This year the club has a somewhat larger enrollment and hopes to accomplish a correspondingly larger amount of work. On its schedule for the year several out-of-town concerts are planned in addition to the annual Middlebury concert.

The varsity debating team this past season was one of the strongest to represent Middlebury in recent years. In view of this fact an extensive southern tour was contracted for the spring vacation which included debates with the University of Virginia and Georgia School of Technology. This schedule was curtailed at a late date by the administration in view of the present business depression.

The regular team was composed of Reamer Kline, '32, Thomas J. Duffield, '33, and Edward Yerovitz, '33. In the opening debate of the season in December Tufts College was engaged in a non-decision affair. Previous to the Christmas vacation a short trip was made to Boston, where a close decision was lost to Boston University. On the preceding evening Keene Normal School of New Hampshire was defeated by a 3-0 judges’ vote.

During March Rhode Island State College and New York University were debated in Mead Memorial Chapel. The first debate of the southern trip was with Albany Law School on March 18. Other teams encountered on the trip were New York University, New Jersey State Teachers' College, Upsala College and Johns Hopkins University. The University of Vermont was met in April.

Through the cooperation of Tau Kappa Alpha tryouts for new men were held in February. The most promising, as selected by members of the debate council, were Lothrop Willis, '35, Wyman Smith, '35, Clark Corfiss, '33, and Randolph Erskine, '34. These men took part in various exhibition debates which were held before Granges throughout the state. Anthony Brackett, '33, Frederick Brink, '33, and William Weier, '33, also spoke in a number of these invitation debates.

The A Tempo Club was founded in 1929 and is an organization for those students in the women’s college who are especially interested in music. Its general aim is to give those who expect to continue their work with musical groups an opportunity for training and practice in such work before other members of the club.

Membership is limited to students in the junior and senior classes who have shown definite interest in the musical activities of the college and who have taken courses in the music department.

Programs for the meetings include discussions of the problems of music in high school, in addition to a study of the best known composers and their music. Professor Hammond, the club adviser, and other members of the faculty are assisting the students in presenting programs.

This year the A Tempo Club has cooperated with the student government association in presenting Friday afternoon musicales in Mead Memorial Chapel and has sponsored Leonard Elsmith lecture recitals.

The Mountain Club

The Mountain Club was organized last year for the purpose of taking advantage of Middlebury's large mountain campus. Since that time so much enthusiasm and interest have been shown in the club's activities that it is now one of the largest in the college.

Both students and faculty are eligible to membership. The Mountain Club sponsors regular outings to nearby points of interest and during the winter months includes several snow-shoe trips among its activities. With the increased membership more equipment has been purchased which may be borrowed by members at any time for individual trips.

The business of the club is carried on by an Executive Board, which also acts as a motivating force behind the organization.

Wig and Pen

Wig and Pen is the honorary dramatic society of the college. Active interest and ability in dramatics qualify students for membership at the end of their junior year.

Last spring a constitution was drawn up which incorporated several new features, including a student president, new eligibility requirements, and an annual Wig and Pen play to be presented during the latter part of the second semester. These changes made in the constitution were effected with a view toward promoting activity in Wig and Pen and advancing its standing among the honor organizations on campus.

Dramatic productions at Middlebury College reached a high degree of excellency during the past year. Improvement in technical work was noted, and interest on the part of the student body increased, with the result that a somewhat more ambitious program of productions was successfully carried out.

The college playhouse is equipped with the material necessary for dramatic work, affording a completely equipped stage and facilities for experimentation in scenery construction and stage design. Courses are offered in dramatic production and in playwriting under the direction of Prof. V. Spencer Goodreds, and his assistant, Eric Swyler, who also supervise the plays presented. Admission to these advanced courses is dependent upon active interest in previous years. The close contact with actual production gives the curriculum subjects opportunity for laboratory work, making possible real experience in the dramatic field.

The dramatic club, to which all students are eligible, is the organization supporting dramatic work. Membership tickets, costing two dollars, entitle the member to free admission to all short plays and to reduced prices at the longer dramas. This membership is also required for participation in acting, stage, scenery, or costume work. An intensive drive is made each fall to secure members, and about two hundred are usually secured.

In addition to the regular college performances, programs of experimental plays to give opportunities for acting and directing to those who would not take part in the regular productions have been given this year.

The outstanding individual performance of the past season was the offering of the former Broadway success, "Death Takes a Holiday," which was given just before the spring vacation. In addition, the programs of one-act plays were very well executed and attracted large audiences.

On October 29 the first set of one-act plays was given: "The Bracelet," by Alfred Sutro, and "Release," by Edward Smith. The first of these plays was one of the social situation type, centering around the loss of a bracelet and the subsequent discovery of a very similar one on a governess's arm. Franklin Butler, as Mr. Western, carried off the honors of the play. "Release" had for its theme the honor of criminals who fear execution for a crime. It moved along rapidly and well, and proved popular with the audience. Edward Yerovitz, as Lefty Veneziano, and Stanley Richmond, as Bull O'Malley, had the principal parts.

The first program of experimental plays: "Red Carnations," by Glenn Hughes; "The Women Understood Men," by John Kilpatrick; and "Brink of Silence," by Esther Galbraith, was presented November 11. The presentation was successful and the interest of the participants augured well for the future.

"The Eligible Mr. Bangs," by Robert Housum, and "The Valiant," by Hall and Middlemass, were offered November 26 and 27. "The Eligible Mr. Bangs," a humorous society play, was well acted by William S. Weier, Faith Arnold, James Tyler and Marjorie Young. "The Valiant," a very strong, well-acted tragedy, centered about the last night in the life of a man about to be executed for murder. Kirkland Sloper acted the tragic part of James Dykes to perfection, and was ably seconded by Barbara Perkins and Matilda Romeo, who alternated in the part of Josephine Paris, the girl. Anthony Brackett, as Warden Holt, and Emery Hutchins, as Father Daly, the chaplain, offered excellent support to the tragic development.

The third program of one-act plays was presented December 16, including "The Golden Doom," by Lord Dunsany, and "The Duchess Says Her Prayers," by Mary Cass Canfield. The scene of both these plays lay in the past and the scenery and costumes designed for them were very fine. "The Golden Doom" had no central character, being after the old historical fashion adopted by Lord Dunsany, but was characterized by excellent acting on the part of the whole cast. "The Duchess Says Her Prayers" had three characters only, being a "triangle" type play. Marion Jones, Eleanor Benjamin and William Dorn all carried off their parts well.

On January 22 the second series of experimental plays was given. "The Diadem of Snow," by Elmer Rice; "A Matter of Husbands," by Ferenc Molnar; and "What Never Dies," by Percival Wilde, composed the program. "The Eligible Mr. Bangs" and "The Valiant" were produced in Rutland for the Rutland community club, January 27. They were presented in a finished manner before an audience of over four hundred.

"Death Takes a Holiday," by Alberto Casella, given March 22, was the high point of the dramatic season. This psychological drama had a long run on the New York stage, and has been hailed as one of the foremost of the past decade. It had been given only once previously by a college group and had never been given by a stock company. The acting showed evidences of thorough preparation and the entire production put a fitting climax on the successful work of the preceding season. The cast was as follows:

Looking back over the days when The Kaleidoscope was a small, paper bound volume, we find records of certain features of the regular college calendar some of which would have contributed much (and some very little) to the present program had they survived. The annual hunt, for an example of the latter, inspired organized teams to go out through the nearby countryside and bring in the largest possible game bag, for a point scored victory. This was abandoned when an over-enthusiastic hunter shot himself in the leg.

Junior week, perhaps the outstanding feature of the present college year began as a three-day period of oratory without the compensation of athletics, dramatics, and the dance. In the day when the art of debating was revered at Middlebury all public holidays had to be observed by formal elocution and prize speaking. It was not until well after the introduction of women at Middlebury that sophomore and freshman "parties" originated, as well as the Literati, Spanish, and Scullions ball
Long ago Middlebury College was a venturesome and precocious infant, indulging in a variety of pranks, which thrived and grew into traditions. Back in the nineteenth century, before the college had entered its 'teens, the Junior class gave a promenade and now this traditional dance is listed as one event on a program of five gala days in May.

At Wednesday morning chapel, when President Moody officially receives his copy of the triumphant 1933 KALEIDOSCOPE, Junior Week dates begin to be real. From then on comes a perfect melange of sports, dancing and drama. You'll go to the Playhouse twice and stand expectantly before the Vermont baseball game, while the Wau-banakees tap their papooses. You can cheer for Midd in baseball—three times—and in tennis, and pick your class in the Soph-Frosh rope tussle. There will be variety of actors and subjects in the fraternity stunts, and as a good starter on Friday, when you're feeling fit for hilarity, comes the greased pig contest. The campus is the place, so there'll be plenty of room for slippery activity.

That night comes a Junior prom such as was never dreamed of when the Junior class danced away an evening back in 1808. Charles Boulanger and his Georgia Melodians will furnish the syncopation. Next morning you can sleep late and then after a tasty breakfast at one of the fraternity houses, you'll want to see how Middlebury women connect arrows and bull's eyes. After the athletics that afternoon the Inn will be the scene of a tea-dance and that evening, after the play, comes the interfraternity sing, to end a day of varied events.

Sunday is your own, with all the glories of a Vermont spring for a setting, until vespers in the afternoon. After supper you can look forward to a band concert and, later in the evening, the intersorority sing on Pearsons steps, overlooking the town toward Lincoln and Breadloaf, makes Junior Week a satisfying memory.

WAUBANAKEE TAPPING
The 1931 Senior Week

A four-day program of senior week activities arranged by George E. Foote and Geraldine G. Griffin, chairman and vice-chairman, respectively, brought to a close on June 15 the undergraduate days of some one hundred and thirty members of the class of 1931.

Class Day exercises were held on lower campus the morning of June 13. The entire class, led by the junior marshals, Harwood W. Cummings and Clarissa C. Holland, marched in procession up the walk to Old Chapel, and then took their places on the seats erected for the exercises. Gerald E. Thayer, class president, gave the opening address. The customary history, prophecy, oration, will, and poem were read, and then the class gathered for the tree dedication. The traditional smoking of the peace pipe by the seniors concluded the exercises.

President Moody, in the Baccalaureate sermon delivered Sunday morning, took as his text: "If Thou be the Christ, tell us plainly." He emphasized that knowledge is the awareness of the unknown, and that only by an unsatisfied longing for ever better solutions of life's problems will man acquire any small measure of success in this life of mystery.

At the conclusion of the Baccalaureate service, word was received of a fire at the Bread Loaf Summer School. The damage amounted to $50,000, with the loss of the annexes, little theatre, and the Davison Memorial Library. A great many of the students and faculty assisted in fighting the blaze.

Dr. Daniel Willard, President of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and recipient of an LL.D. degree at this time, gave the address at the one hundred thirty-first commencement of Middlebury College. This service, held at the Congregational Church, concluded the Commencement Program.

The Soph Hop

Soft lights, a good band and a group of happy couples lent the proper atmosphere of formality to the occasion as the annual Soph Hop opened the season for class dances on Thanksgiving Eve, at the Inn. The number attending may not have been as large as in previous years, owing to the popularly termed "depression," but surely not once after he was on the inside looking out did Sir Galahad regret having parted with his sixty-odd bits—all for her.

The committee had secured Gordie Randall's Hotel Van Curler orchestra from Schenectady, and somehow it must be true, "the nearer the better," for the music they furnished for the gay dancers was even better than their regular Saturday radio broadcasts over WGY, and that is saying a lot!

COMMITTEE
Kenneth Miner, chairman; Louis Baumgartner, Edward Bugbee, James Hutton, John Fallon, Douglas Jocelyn, Richard Smith, Francis Sprague, Phelps Swett, Glenna Bump, Elizabeth Brown, Elizabeth Seckerson, Dorothy Smith, Anna Tuthill and Barbara West.

The Literati Ball

And then December came and went, and the new year brought with it another college formal. For the fourth time in as many years, the Literati donned their best, and the annual procession of Middlebury's taxis started for the Inn. Seventy-four couples danced away the evening to music furnished by the Cunarders orchestra, from the University of Vermont. William Hazlett Upson brought forth his accordion before intermission, and in his usual humorous manner entertained with a variety of selections, including the latest in hymns. Attractive programs in white and blue gave the proper alma mater touch, and all in all it may be quite logically termed one of the best dances we ever attended. But aren't all Literati Balls just this?

COMMITTEE
Charles P. Bailey, chairman; William Herr, A. Kirkland Slover, Clark Corliss, Henry Newman, Marion Ball and Dorothy Cornwall.

The Scullions' Ball

The scullions of Hepburn fame like to combine the dinner and dance, in a most exclusive fashion; so it was that forty servants and forty co-eds walked up and up until they reached the social hall, scene of the tenth annual Scullions' Ball. The Black Panthers made their first appearance at a formal in Middlebury this year, and included among their numbers several novelty features. Of course the formal dinner was grand, but so was the music, and so was the dancing—in fact, everything was just what one would expect of this unusual annual affair. Perhaps it is because they have really worked as scullions in the past that these men can always give such a fine ball, and no doubt it is partly due to the place where it is held, but in any case, it stood out as one of THE dances of the Middlebury social calendar.

COMMITTEE
Henry Newman, chairman; Richard McDermott, Gordon Ide, George Yeomans and Warner Wright.

The Frosh Frolic

But it isn't only the upper classmen who can put on a good formal. Each year the Freshmen prove that they, too, are qualified to enter right into the spirit of the thing by giving their own Frosh Frolic. So frolic we did, at the Middlebury Inn, and to the tune of our well-known Black Panthers. The distinction of this affair lay in its being semi-formal, but none the less a highlight among the college functions of the year. Somehow Saint Valentine has always been unanimously chosen sponsor for the Frolic, and perhaps it is fitting that he should be the one to introduce the newest class each year to the indefinable something which takes hold of us annually just previous to spring. The Freshmen did their best, and the result was just another of those "best" dances.

COMMITTEE
Walter Boehm, chairman; Roger Bakey, Frank Bourne, Robert McDermott, Robert Stafford, John Thurston, Elizabeth Coley, Elizabeth Halpin, Esther Johnson and Barbara Perkins.
Acknowledgments

The executive board of the 1933 Kaleidoscope was especially fortunate in its selection of printers, engravers, and photographers, for, through their prompt and efficient work and valuable suggestions, it was possible to get this book out on time. Among those we wish to mention in particular are Mr. William L. Schilling, of the Schilling Press, Inc., of New York City; Mr. George Ebenhek and Miss Bessie E. Ellinson, of White Studio; Mr. A. A. Lubersky, of the S. K. Smith Cover Company, of Chicago; and Mr. Harold Lafferty and Mr. E. R. Adler, of the Canton Engraving and Electrotype Company, of Canton, Ohio.

The Board is also grateful to Mr. John H. Kiem, commercial artist of New York City, for his kind cooperation and assistance in planning the view section.

Acknowledgment is also made to Randolph Erskine, of the sophomore class, for his invaluable work in photography; to Reamer Kline for his sincere encouragement and assistance in backing the policy of the book; and to the innumerable other individuals who have made possible the publication of the 1933 Kaleidoscope.

HIS mark is your year book insurance. It identifies a standard of excellence in the production of College Annuals.

We point with pride to our identification with such an association of master printers who take pride in their work, and whose constant aim is the upbuilding of the better annuals.

That these colleges have repeatedly entrusted the printing of their annuals to us indicates the worth of such association.
